Errant Hubby Program In City

By LIZ HUGHES
Times Staff

VANCOUVER — A pilot project designed to collect alimony for welfare recipients from errant spouses will operate in Victoria in November and December, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Thursday.

"We, as the state, have to seek him out, sock it to him, and make him pay," Vander Zalm told the women's auxiliary to the Social Credit Party of B.C. during the party's annual convention in Vancouver.

The alimony-collecting program is contained in legislation introduced during the last session and the minister said Thursday the program will be tried out on a trial basis in Victoria for two months before it is introduced on a province-wide scale.

Any deserted spouse applying for welfare in the Victoria area who is entitled to, but not receiving, alimony or support payment will come under the new system.

The department of human resources will attempt to collect the money owing to the welfare recipient rather than the persons themselves having to go through the courts to get the money.

The purpose of the pilot project is to determine how much staff and money will be needed to operate the program. The Victoria project will operate with existing staff and will not cost any extra money, the minister said.

When the department tracks down a spouse who has not kept up support payments it will be up to the courts to decide how the money should be paid, but Vander Zalm suggested a person's wages could be garnisheed or a claim made against his assets.

New Hua Position Confirmed

TOKYO (AP) — China's official news agency gave the first official confirmation today the appointment of Premier Hua Kuo-feng to succeed Mao Tse-tung as chairman of the Chinese Communist party and of the purge of Mao's widow and three other leaders of the party's radical wing.

Reporting on the huge demonstration in Peking Thursday against Chiang Ching, Mao's widow, and her three radical allies on the party Politburo, the Hsinhua agency said:

"The party central committee headed by Chairman Hua Kuo-feng adopted resolute and decisive measures to crush the counter-revolutionary conspiratorial clique and liquidated a bane inside the party."

The use of the word "liquidated" in the Hsinhua report was not considered an indication that the four had been executed. No political executions are known to have taken place in China in recent years, not even during the stormiest days of the radicals' Curtural Revolution.

Japanese correspondents in Peking reported that the demonstrations continued today for the second day, with military personnel, workers and students marching and beating drums and gongs.

Although wall posters in Peking first reported the promotion of the 57-year-old premier on Oct. 9, Hsinhua's report today was the first by an official organ to refer to him as party chairman.

Pet Makes Monkey Out of Deliveryman

DELTA (CP) — A 24-year-old truck driver picked up more than he could handle when making deliveries near Vancouver on Thursday.

Bill Longton had parked his department store truck and was checking parcel labels when his vehicle was commandeered by an escaped pet monkey.

"The right-hand door was open and in jumps this hairy thing wearing a jean jacket and it starts swinging around the bars in the back of the truck," he said. "It gave me a bit of a scare."

Longton jumped out of the truck and slammed both doors shut. Some bystanders offered to call the police and someone did contact them. But apparently police thought it was a hoax and didn't respond until a second call was made about half an hour later.

Longton watched in despair as the monkey ate his pipe tobacco and helped himself to his lunch. When he got bored with that he started opening parcels.

He then began tuning the radio to a station he liked better and checking the delivery books.

"He smashed my record books," Longton said. "It took me about an hour just to get them in order again. It was just havoc."

Finally police arrived and found the monkey's owner, Terry Rosvold.

"He was a really nice guy," Longton said. "He also had a very friendly pet raccoon but my problems weren't over because the monkey had swallowed my truck keys.

"I was told it was a South American short-tailed monkey that has some sort of pouch and the owner managed to get the keys out for me."

Rosvold also recovered the tuning knob from the monkey's mouth.

Rosvold said Bill is a two-year-old South American stub-tailed monkey. He had been tied with a rope lead to a willow tree after a walk when he got away, he said.

Bill has never escaped before but it didn't surprise Rosvold.

"He's smart as hell. He can open a door, he can untie a simple knot — he doesn't miss a thing."

MACHINE-GUN GUARDS FOR NUCLEAR PLANT

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — The Hanford nuclear reservation is training a 32-member special guard unit armed with machine-guns and supplied with two armored personnel carriers, the U.S. government said Thursday.

The government and a contractor which supplies 160 patrolmen for the 570-square mile desert reservation said the weaponry would provide additional security.

Asked if Hanford is increasing security because it expects attacks by terrorists, James Kennedy, commander of the guard force provided by Atlantic Richfield Hanford Co., said "not really . . . we are continually upgrading our safeguards at the project."

"We are aware of the fact there are problems in the nation with terrorist groups."

One reason for security guards at Hanford is to protect the N reactor, which produces plutonium for atomic weapons.

Storm Smashes Tall Ship

HALIFAX (CP) — The 30-year-old barquentine Erawan, one of the tall ships seen in New York harbor July 4, has been smashed to pieces on rocks in the Canso Strait.

The transport ministry said today only a small part of the hull of the 150-foot, three-masted vessel was visible after winds of up to 96 kilometres swept the area Thursday.

The crew were all rescued.

Body Parts Taken

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two planes collided over a residential neighborhood Thursday, scattering burning wreckage and pieces of the two pilots over a wide area, including an elementary school.

Despite efforts by police, firemen and federal aviation inspectors, souvenir hunters stole some of the body parts along with pieces of the planes needed by investigators, police said.

"They were carrying off everything from airplane parts to actual pieces of bodies," a Culver City police office was quoted as telling the Los Angeles Times.

"You couldn't believe it. They must have been out of their minds."

Tough Stand Taken By City on Police

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Mayor Mike Young today warned the city will not tolerate "unlawful" job action by the Victoria Policemen's Union as a means of forcing contract settlement.

Following a 75-minute meeting this morning with other members of the Victoria police board and Deputy Police Chief Les Mottershead, Young said the city cannot tolerate or condone tactics like Thursday's sick book-off by all 21 members of the night shift.

And he warned that a precondition to continued negotiations must be a return to normal staffing.

Young said he had arranged a meeting for later today with the police union, at which he hoped to present certain "possible and potential solutions to the problem."

After the nightshift personnel booked off sick Thursday, 16 day-shift officers worked overtime and most members of the late-night shift (starting at 11:30 p.m.) reported for duty three hours early to help replace the missing officers. (The night shift starts at 3:30 p.m.)

This morning, however, all members of the 7:30 a.m. shift reported for duty as usual. Mottershead said he had no idea what the staff situation would be later in the day.

A member of the union estimated if the necessity of overtime shifts continues, it will cost the city $1,200 a shift.

Young agreed the action was costly: "When you run the kitty dry, there is no way you can easily accept a settlement which we had basically agreed upon, on the assumption that we had the funds to pay for it."

Young also made it clear that any extra expense forced by job action will make it that much more difficult to reach a settlement.

Spokesmen for both sides said earlier there was agreement on virtually all aspects of the 1976 contract, but the stumbling block is the question of retroactive payment in the agreed eight per cent increase.

The union is insisting on immediate retroactive pay, but the police board says the contract must receive the approval of the Anti-Inflation Board.

Young told reporters this

Canada 'On Verge of Break-Up'

MONTREAL (CP) — Bryce Mackasey attacked Quebec separatism as well as the province's Official Language Act Thursday night.

Addressing a largely English-speaking audience in west-end Dorval, the former federal cabinet minister said that Canada is on the verge of breaking up.

He blamed most of the "fear, frustration and hostility" experienced by Quebec's minorities and residents of other provinces on the province's language act.

Resource Man Cited

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Russell Jeffs, 63, a human resources department social worker, was charged Thursday with theft of $20,000 from a New Westminster social club for mentally retarded and former mental patients.

Cars Canned

VANCOUVER (CP) — Use of complimentary police cars supplied by auto dealers was scrapped Thursday by the Vancouver Police Commission. Chief Don Winterton said criticism of the cars by the media was having a poor effect on morale. The cars carry decals stating: Vancouver Police Community Relations Unit and the name of the dealer who supplied the vehicle.

Tunnel Under Suez

LONDON (WP) — Egypt is about to build a tunnel under the Suez Canal which would pose a major threat to Israel, the Daily Mail reported today. The paper's military correspondent said Egypt had a $48 million contract with two British firms that included secret clauses covering the boring of a tunnel big enough to let tanks cross rapidly under the waterway.

FOOT PASSENGERS TO GET BREAK

He emphasized the government is not considering cutting the rates for vehicles.

Any official announcement will have to come from the new B.C. Ferries Corporation, which takes over ferries operation Jan. 1. But Davis said the government has already studied the impact of dropping fares for foot passengers in off-peak periods.

The one-way fare is now $4 between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen and Nanaimo's Departure Bay and Horseshoe Bay, doubled by the government in June.

Davis said the off-peak periods could include Monday through Thursday during winter and Saturday noon to Sunday noon. Full fares would apply throughout summer and on all holidays and long weekends.

Did Spray Cause Defects?

That summer Mrs. Renaud conceived her first child Sarah, who was born in May the following year with a spinal defect. A second daughter, Tamie, was born with the same defect in February, 1975.

Although she can't prove it, Mrs. Renaud believes that she, along with other women on the island who miscarried that year, was a victim of a chemical assault.

$7B Fiddle by Ottawa, Auditor-General Charges

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has overstated its financial standing by about $7 billion through a series of questionable accounting practices which include irrecoverable loans to Crown corporations and foreign states, Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell says.

In a critical assessment of federal book-keeping, Macdonell said the government is misrepresenting its assets by counting as revenue a wide range of costly programs and loans that were supposed to be—but are not self-financing or repayable.

He specifically mentioned more than $2 billion in payments to the unemployment insurance fund, numerous loans to Canadian National, the National Harbors Board, the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority and other Crown corporations and more than $1.2 billion in payments to foreign countries.

He said government accounting practices are undermining Parliament's control over the public purse and distorting the government's real financial position.

Macdonell, Parliament's watchdog over government spending, took the unusual step of including his criticisms in the first volume of the public accounts, the annual summary of federal income and spending which was tabled in the Commons earlier this week. Two succeeding volumes of the public accounts to be released next week will give details of revenue and spending for individual government departments and Crown corporations for the fiscal year ended last March 31.

The auditor-general routinely criticizes government financial bungling in his annual report to Parliament expected later this fall. This year he has included portions of his annual report in the public accounts.

Macdonell listed $7.1 billion in loans and repayable advances to special funds which, he said, will either be written off as bad debts or covered through appropriations by Parliament. This is partially offset by $108 million sitting in special government accounts as liabilities which should be returned to the central revenue fund and listed as assets.

151 ARRESTED IN DRUG RAID

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Thursday that 151 persons have been charged with 191 counts of trafficking in narcotics in the largest drug roundup in the Vancouver area.

A police spokesman said that by late Thursday about 55 suspects had been apprehended and the arrests were continuing.

The charges related to trafficking in heroin, cocaine, speed, mescaline, marijuana and hashish.

Law, Order and the WA Rally Socred Women

Times Staff

VANCOUVER — The women's auxiliary to the B.C. Social Credit Party survived a threat to its very existence Thursday and will be back to fight the battle for law and order again next year.

The threat to the auxiliary came during the party's annual convention in Vancouver in the form of a motion from Anita Tozer, sister of Premier Bill Bennett.

Mrs. Tozer, calling the auxiliary "chauvinistic" and "redundant," attempted to disband the organization and have it join with the party as a whole in the cause of unity.

But the 112 voting delegates to the auxiliary convention quickly warded off the suggestion by defeating the motion overwhelmingly.

"Behind every good man, there's a good woman," one delegate said during the debate.

Mrs. Tozer was asked later if her motion represented a move by the powers that be in the party, including her brother, to get rid of the auxiliary which at times causes the party some embarrassment. But she said the motion came from the Kelowna branch of the auxiliary and was not discussed with her brother.

The organization, known simply as the "W.A" to those who belong, dealt mainly with law and order resolutions such as banning "vulgar and obscene" sex education books and with the sterilization of rapists.

The rape question generated some heated debate and the chairman several times had to warn the delegates that rape is not a laughing matter.

The resolution called for the sterilization of all proven rapists and was eventually referred back to the Dawson Creek W. A. for further research.

One delegate attempted to move an amendment to the motion which called for the castration of rapists, but another said the idea was ridiculous because "if he can't rape he might kill."

The debate veered off on several tangents and one woman suggested that instead of "circumcision or whatever it is we're talking about," that rapists be put away for good.

The delegates also got a chance to take a swing at bilingualism in Canada.

The organization's newsletter is called the "W.A. Communique" and there was a motion to change the name to

NDP SCOFFS AT JOB PROGRAM

OTTAWA (CP)—New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent attacked the government today for making a big deal about new job creation programs when they won't even be put into place until the next fiscal year.

Thursday night Manpower Minister Bud Cullen announced that the government plans to spend about $350 million on four new job-producing programs and other plans designed to reduce unemployment.

He said $110 million of the program would be paid for with savings resulting from changes in the unemployment insurance system, still subject to parliamentary debate and a vote by MPs.

The rest of the money would have to be voted for such use in the federal budget for the 1977-78 fiscal year and the programs would likely be in place next spring.

But, noting the unemployment rate is above seven per cent, Broadbent expressed digust that the cabinet could not come up with a job-creation program that could be immediately started to offset the struggle of Canadians without jobs this winter.

Early in his speech announcing the programs, Cullen made a "pious commitment" to reduce unemployment, the New Democratic Party leader said.

He predicted unemployment would rise to about nine per cent of the labor force this winter and the fact that the government was doing "nothing new" about it showed its old lazy attitudes.

In the exchange during the Commons daily question period Cullen defended the government, particularly his predecessor Robert Andras, under whom the Local Initiatives Program was introduced. LIP is a winter and spring job-producing program that Cullen says has provided jobs for 93,000 people.

The two also sparred over whether the employment picture would be so good in the next decade that there would be more jobs than workers.

If every available job in the country were filled today, thousands would still be unemployed, Broadbent said.

In his statement, Cullen had said that in the eary 1980s "when the influx of young people seeking jobs will taper off, we may well face a situation in which the shortage becomes one of workers rather than jobs."

Ireland's President Resigns

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — President Carroll O'Daly of Ireland resignel today in a dispute over antiterrorism legislation, officials announced.

The resignation came four days after Defence Minister Patrick Donegan branded him "a thundering disgrace" for raising constitutional doubts about the government's antiterrorist legislation.

O'Daly, a former chief justice and a constitutional expert, refused to accept a personal apology from Donegan who made the statement in an official speech Monday.

Donegan, one of the prime movers of the government's legislative package aimed at smashing outlawed Irish Republican Army guerrillas, was angered when O'Daly last month sent the two antiterrorist bills to Ireland's supreme court for judgment on their constitutionality.

Firms Lose Gov't Aid If They Join Boycott

OTTAWA (FP) — Canadian companies will face a loss of government aid if they take part in Arab nations' boycott campaign against Israel, External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson announced Thursday.

In outlining the new policy to the Commons, Jamieson said the Arabs' discriminatory boycott was "contrary to Canadian concepts of fairness."

However, the minister admitted if some firms were willing to forego government support on certain projects there was nothing to stop them from complying with the boycott.

They would, however, face possible bad publicity. The government would make public instances of compliance with boycott provisions.

The multi-faceted Arab boycott against Israel has been in place for over two decades and opposition spokesmen yesterday criticized the government for taking so long before taking a stand and some said it was too weak.

The boycott requires that those wanting to do business with Arab countries not do business with Israel, that goods shipped to Arab countries be in non-Israeli ships that do not touch Israeli ports, that no Israeli parts be used in goods shipped to Arab countries and, sometimes, that there be no Jews on boards of directors of companies dealing with Arabs

David Orlikow (NDP—Winnipeg North) told the Commons the government policy would have little impact on the boycott and urged a law, like that proposed in the United States, to outlaw participation in the boycott.

Jamieson rejected this approach saying it presented too many complications.

Conservative external affairs critic Claude Wagner approved of the new policy but said it was "long overdue" morning he has been in contact with the regional AIB representative David Chapman who is now in Ottawa and hopes Chapman will contact him soon with a ruling.

Asked why there is an impasse when a simple phone call to the AIB offices in Vancouver should have clarified the situation, Young replied "unfortunately it is not that simple.

"Phone calls are not very reassuring because they have a habit of changing in translation between the verbal word and the written result. I am not a great telephone man."

The mayor said the police action Thursday was obviously a "concerted one", and he is disappointed because he considers the city police department highly responsible.

"I can understand the frustration of the force, and they have my sympathy in that regard," he said. "Unfortunately, they are looking for a little more than sympathy."

He added, however, that it is important for all concerned to avoid a "hasty or visceral response."

the weather

Extensive fog and low cloud blanketed the inner south coast and several Interior valleys early this morning, and should continue Saturday as a stagnant air mass continues over the province. Temperatures remain on the cool side. The ridge of high pressure responsible for holding the weather disturbances offshore appears to be breaking down at last. As a result a return to the more usual type of fall weather is in the offing. The first in a series of Pacific disturbances will reach the north coast on Saturday.

Tillicum because communique "has a decided French flavor."

The motion was eventually defeated, but one delegate who supported it said the name was definitely French and "we're having too much bilingualism stuffed down our necks."

The delegates also opposed the government's proposed mandatory seat belt legislation, saying that it is an invasion of privacy and freedom and "our first step in Social Credit towards a dictatorship."

Motions were also passed opposing gun control, fluoridation of water, and employer associations which become accredited bargaining agencies, the latter passing without debate.

North Okanagan MLA Pat Jordan, speaking on the motion to disband the organization, said that most of the women in the auxiliary are not bra-burners — "most of us can't afford to be, figuratively speaking."

"They're at work even today in every nook and cranny," she said.

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm was the keynote speaker at the auxiliary luncheon and his speech was peppered with applause and cheers every few words. Vander Zalm found a popular subject with the ladies when he vowed again to seek out welfare abusers, kick them out of the welfare system and give them all shovels.

Police Uniforms Standardized

Municipal policemen throughout the province will all be wearing the standardized uniform within three years, Attorney-General Garde Gardom announced Thursday.

In future there will only be two police uniforms in B.C. — the national RCMP uniform and the new municipal one.

Saanich, Central Saanich, Esquimalt ad Oak Bay will be included with eight other provincial police forces in adopting the standard police dress.

Standardization will ensure that police officers will be readily identifiable by citizens as members of a police force, regardless of the municipality involved, Gardom said.

The new type uniform will be phased in within three years to allow existing uniform supplies to be fully utilized so there will be no finaicial loss to the municipalities which operate their own police departments.

Identification includes a name or number plate over the right breast pocket, a pocket badge depicting the municipal crest and marked "police" and an identification card (white with blue printing). The front side will clearly indicate the municipality and the police department, the full name of the officer and the date of appointment as a peace officer, present rank and signature of the chief constable.

The standardized uniform was developed by the B.C. Police Commission in co-operation with the B.C. Association of Chiefs of Police and the B.C. Federation of Peace Officers.

Sharon Home Soon?

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 22-year-old Richmond woman held for eight months in a Mexican jail has nothing to worry about and should be released early next week, officials of both the Canadian and Mexican governments said Thursday.

Sharon Bethune was arrested in Mexico City in February and has been held since then without charges being laid in Santa Marta prison near the city.

She was arrested after her boyfriend, Kenneth Terry, of Vancouver, allegedly attempted to use counterfeit United States currency.

Sean Brady, external affairs department senior duty officer, said Miss Bethune is almost certain to be released early next week.

And David Bickford, Canada's vice-consul in Mexico, said he is hoping a judge will decide on Monday or Tuesday whether Miss Bethune should be released.

Jorge Rivera-Ruiz, Mexico's counsul in Vacouver, said there is nothing to worry about.

Asked if there was a possibility of retaliation against Miss Bethune for the publicity, he replied: "of course not."

He said the issue was of great concern to his country: "It really concerns me when it could damage the image of Mexico. I'm sure the Mexican government will take some action on the matter."

PLANE FOUND: MISSILE MISSING

WASHINGTON (CP) — A U.S. Navy crew which located an F-14 fighter jet on the bottom of the Atlantic Ocean reported today that the aircraft's top-secret Phoenix missile is missing.

Earlier, the crew had reported that the missile was attached to the fighter plane.

The fighter, which rolled off the deck of the U.S. aircraft carrier John F. Kennedy, was located Thursday in 1,900 feet of water off the coast of Scotland.

The navy had been searching for the jet for nearly a month.

A Pentagon spokesman said that the nuclear-powered research vessel NR1 which located the plane is continuing its search for the missile.

Preparations are still under way to retrieve the $14-million plane from the ocean floor, the spokesman said.

On Thursday, the navy said the plane was located lying on its back, wih its three landing gears intact, and the Phoenix missile "secure in place" on the bottom of the plane.

Today's announcement said the missile "is not attached to the aircraft as originally believed."

Socreds Laud Bennett Pitch

The huge convention hall in the Hyatt Regency Hotel rang with applause throughout Bennett's speech as he called down the NDP and a "bully government" and told his people the province is strong.

If an applause meter had been working in the convention hall, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm and Provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy would have blown the indicator off the end.

Both got standing ovations when they were introduced and while Bennett outlined Vander Zalm's clean-up job in the welfare sysltem, the delegates jumped to their feet again.

Bennett's speech was a combination of indictment of the NDP and praise for his own good works.

He said he had just unearthed a copy of the budget the NDP would have brought in "if somehow they had been able to sneak back into power last winter."

The budget, he claimed, was pegged at $4.5 billion, $1 billion more than the Bennett budget brought down last spring.

The NDP budget, Bennett said, would have necessitated higher taxes and would have left "a debt load for your children and for your children's children because they (the NDP) tried to give the illusion of a free ride."

The Social Credit administration has stopped the inflation spiral in government spending and through the "painful decision" of raising taxes has stabilized government finances.

"The day we were sworn in we phoned the finance department and said 'lock up the cash box, the honeymoon is over.' "

Bennett is expected to run into at least some opposition to his hard financial policies at this convention but his pronouncements this morning received only applause.

Even after nine months in power, the Social Credit members seemed eager for their leader's assaults on the previous government.

"We lifted the rug and found the mess of a declining economy that had been swept there by the NDP, covered up and withheld from the people of this province.

Towards the end of the speech, Bennett seemed to hint that his party shouldn't blame labor for the province's ills.

Some Truth From Labor

Every so often, some one individual will do or say something of such compelling force and honesty, everyone else is forced to stop for a minute and ponder. Just such a moment was the comment by N. D. Secord, president of the 40,000-member Canadian Brotherhood of Railway, Transport and General Workers. Speaking to his union's 30th annual meeting, Secord said organized labor, business and government have all shown total disregard for Canada's wellbeing and future by wilful and headlong pursuit in individual greed.

Secord said the trade union movement was destroying its effectiveness by its "public-be-damned" attitude. And he charged it was selfish regarding its own as well. Although only 35 per cent of Canada's workforce is unionized, the existing unions concentrate on getting more for themselves rather than on organizing the unorganized. Secord's remarks were immediately dumped upon by fellow trade unionists, who rightly saw them as an opening for labor's enemies. But Secord's comments are more than an opening for labor's enemies. They are a truism — and as much an indictment of our whole society as they are of the union movement, which is, after all, a part and therefore a reflection of it.

The elemental force of North American society — that there will always be more, bigger and better — is being overtaken by reality.

There are limits to growth. The economy has only so much to give. Social inequities can no longer be salved by just making the pie bigger. The same-sized pie may have to be cut a different way and people may have to stop thinking only of self-interest. Instead of spending millions on that futile Day of Protest last week, the Canadian Labor Congress would have been more in keeping with its own ideals to have spent that money, effort and organization on the 65 per cent of wrokers who can't yet bargain collectively. It is those workers who are being pinched by controls. Their wages have been kept down to 6 per cent this year, below the rate of inflation. Union wages, on the other hand, have gone up by 12 per cent, almost double the inflation rate. And business shouldn't smile and nod agreement with Secord's indictment of labor. The principle of greed and selfishness is in full swing there as well. Business, using just a more genteel voice and methodology, successfully bludgeons government and the public into fulfilling its demands for "more" as a price for further investment.

Many people will brand Secord's remarks as idealistic and unrealistic. And they probably are. But if man is ever to inch ahead, it has to be through confronting moments of self-revelation such as contained in the labor leader's speech.

Indifference On Energy Matters

Future generations of Canadians will look back in dismay at the inept manner in which a decade of Liberal governments handled national energy matters. A little more than 10 years ago Ottawa was telling us we had so much oil it was a shame not to export it to our friends in the United States. Now we have had to drastically cut back oil export sales because we are on the verge of running out of petroleum supplies Succeeding Liberal administrations accepted oil industry figures as though they were carved in rock. The same goes for our current natural gas figures which seem to change every day.

Unfortunately, the Trudeau administration seems incapable of learning from its mistakes. There was Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie telling the National Conference on Coal last week that unprecedented growth in the coal industry could be expected during the next 15 years. But, the minister added, by implication, that Canada really doesn't have any idea how much coal languishes in the old soil. So here we are at the onset of a coal boom, shovelling the stuff out to any foreign customer who will take it at bargain rates (especially in B.C.) without knowing how long the supply will last.

The same bumbling can be seen in the government-run uranium industry where warnings of future shortages have been made from several responsible quarters while existent supplies are committed to foreign markets. Shortages of electrical power in the Maritimes have resulted in huge price increases for consumers and industry alike. Meanwhile, Newfoundland's hydro resources are not being developed or transmitted because of a dispute with Quebec. The list of snafus is almost endless. But the federal government refuses to develop a national energy policy. Instead, one ad hoc measure is pasted on top of another as the government finds it has been hoodwinked again or failed to anticipate a supply crisis in another element of the energy field.

Now the minister talks about an increased informational flow as a cornerstone of the government's new policy of energy self-reliance. Once again where initiative fails, the Trudeau administration throws a blizzard of paper into the breach. The trouble is it burns too fast to keep people warm. A massive inventory of Canadian energy reserves should be undertaken immediately. It should be done by the government without the help of vested interests. Clear definitions should be made between potential, accessible and usable resources. At least we would then know where we are going. It would remain for the government to allocate diminishing resources on a need basis. But an administration that hasn't the courage to audit its own natural resources might find it difficult to make the tough decisions that will be required in future because of this past decade of indifference and vacillation.

DAVID MACDONALD

U.K.'s Mysterious Canadian

LONDON — The radical wing of the British Liberal Party has turned the spotlight on the wealthy, but enigmatic, Canadian who seeks to save the National Liberal Club with his own money.

Peter Hain, president of the Young Liberals and editor of the party's monthly newsletter, Radical Bulletin, has asked in the latest issue for a full inquiry into George de Chabris, the millionaire who was born in Hamilton, Ont., and grew up in Montreal.

This comes a few days after The Times published a lengthy article in which two reporters in London and one in Washington investigated the business background of Mr. de Chabris, including his use in business deals of such names as Duke de Vatan, Baron de Mornay and Serene Highness.

Mr. de Chabris has reacted to the Hain call by telling a Guardian reporter that he plans to sue Mr. Hain for one million pounds.

The suprise in all this is not that some Liberals wish to know more about Mr. de Chabris but that it has taken so long for anyone to say so publicly.

He has been a figure of mystery to Liberals since he publicly surfaced earlier this year as the man who would use his own funds to put the National Liberal Club back on to a paying basis. Closure had been facing the club as it shared the common affliction of major London private clubs of declining membership, soaring costs and a change in social customs that puts less emphasis on the importance of such establishments.

He took over the club's lease and became its landlord, took over responsibility for the operating loss this year of over $100,000 and began spending money prodigally to improve the rather gloomy premises. He told one London newspaper he was prepared to spend "a million or two" if necessary to save the club.

Such open-handed generosity would not be cause for much concern among Liberals were it not for other aspects of his connection with the Liberal Club, in which he lives.

Alarm signals rang in some parts of the party when he insisted that the national party headquarters move into the club building. Then it became known that he planned to also have in the club building the headquarters of his own Tax Reform League.

This league, which he says will have lavish funding, promotes his view that the way to solve Britain's problems is to abolish personal and corporate taxes and to put in their place heavy sales taxes. This personal crusade would have caused little worry in the party had not the whole idea suddenly turned up at this fall's Liberal party annual conference as a contender for a firm place in party policy.

Backing it was John Pardoe, the party's spokesman on economic affairs in Parliament, chairman of the party standing committee which considers new policy ideas and candidate for the party leadership who lost to David Steel. He persuaded the delegates to send the idea to his standing committee for possible entry into next year's party manifesto.

This little conference coup caused party radicals to ask how it had been achieved and their inquiries led back to Mr. de Chabris and his Tax Reform League.

When The Times listed a series of complicated financial deals in which Mr. de Chabris used not only his own name but a variation, George L. Marks, and other more exotic ones, Peter Hain and his supporters felt the time had come for an answer to the question put in the radical bulletin: "Who is George de Chabris? Nobody knows, least of all the Liberal party."

Mr. Hain said later: "The unease felt about the situation is not the prerogative of the radicals of the party. It is shared throughout the Liberal movement."

Mr. de Chabris, who The Times described as favoring Britain becoming an offshore tax haven, said he is not worried about the call for an inquiry into his background. But he did seem to be upset when he added: "As a matter of fact, I've read that radical bulletin and Peter Hain is being sued by me for a million pounds. Now he'll have to put his money where his mouth is."

ROB BULL

Quebec's Hasty Election

QUEBEC — The first day of the Quebec election campaign was a strange one, which started with a long and boring wait for newsmen as Premier Robert Bourassa met first with opposition party leaders, then with most of his caucus members.

From Montreal, Rene Levesque, leader of the Parti Quebecois, reacted with a terse statement which did not once mention the independence of Quebec.

"These hasty elections," he said, "offer Quebec voters the unhoped for chance to get rid of the Bourassa government one year earlier than predicted."

"This government has already lasted longer than any other since Duplessis. It has accumulated so many errors and so much costly inaction, so many resignations and even scandals, that the majority of citizens feel visibly that it is time things changed."

The PQ also sent a communique which said Mr. Levesque would be the party candidate in the south-shore Montreal suburban riding of Taillon vacated by Guy Leduc, who was removed from the Liberal party after the province's police commission inquiry into organized crime discovered he had questionable relationships with the Mafia.

While the newsmen waited for Rodrigue Biron, of the Union Nationale, an aide came out of his office and asked them, "What would you say if I told you Jerome Choquette was on the line and wants to form an electoral alliance with us and his People's National Party."

A French-Canadian reporter in a long trenchcoat did not even take the cigarette out his mouth as he drawled, "That would be pretty funny."

Then they were ushered into Biron's office to meet the bearded man himself in modish yellow shirtsleeves and to be told that Premier Bourassa's efforts to fight the election on the constitution were "a smoke screen." The real issue, said Mr. Biron, aside from the Liberal's lacklustre performance as a government, is the deteriorating state of the Quebec economy with industries closing and a 10 per cent unemployment rate.

As for the Union Nationale itself, he said, which is against Bill 22, it was short of funds "but richer than ever in volunteers,"

They had been putting the machine into gear for weeks and their mood was one of subdued anti-climax. As they filed in to meet the premier, they were given numbered copies of the party's program which they had to turn in an hour-and-a-half later.

Some Liberals were confident. Robert Malouin of Drummond said he was better prepared than during the 1973 election sweep and was looking forward to a good campaign.

On the other hand, Fernand Lalonde who is solicitor-general and the minister responsible for administering part of the Quebec language law said:

ROBERT BOURASSA
... a brusque announcement

"In 1973, I carried my riding Marguerite-Bourgeois with a margin of 13,000 votes. Now with this Bill 22 business, I consider I'm starting neck and neck with the opposition."

Harry Blank, member for the mid-town Montreal riding of Ste. Marie with its special mix of French-Canadians, immigrants, and young apartment-dwelling singles, lashed out at English-speaking reporters for not condemning out of hand the efforts of city councillors opposed to Mayor Jean Drapeau to field their own, independent candidates to get greater action on urban problems from the provincial government.

Blank will have to fight Nick Auf der Mauer, author of a book on the Olympic games and the man who defeated one of Mayor Drapeau's closest lieutenants.

In Montreal Tuesday, it became obvious that the Liberals face a severe organization problem in all areas not controlled by French-Canadian members of the party. Some Liberals fear that resentment about Bill 22 might lose them those seats where the English or immigrant vote made the little extra difference in their favor in the past.

Premier Bourassa spent part of the day trying to justify the language law to Greek and Portugese-Canadians in his own riding of Mercier which he narrowly won in 1973.

The premier to date has firmly refused to counter suggestions that non-Franco-Quebecois be protected from possibly discriminatory aspects of the law by making it subject to the Quebec Bill of Rights. He has also not been able to explain why it is necessary to break up families by sending some Canadian children to a school where they learn French instead of one where both English and French are taught, and why all people who speak French are not francophones.

The party is still searching for candidates in many Montreal-area ridings. Volunteers are hard to find and a province-wide hotline on English-language CBC radio revealed substantial possible support for the Union Nationale although there appears to be doubt that the party is well-enough organized to take advantage of it.

Nevertheless, there were rumors from several areas of rural Quebec that old Creditistes and U.N. members were getting together again to fight the Liberals.

But if the Liberals in the west-end of the city appeared in serious disarray, the Pequistes in the east-end are off and running.

Claude. Charron, the PQ's peppery member for St. Jacques, has been hammering on doors in his inner-city riding since January.

He and his crew are up on the latest welfare and health statistics in his riding and have been keeping a close eye on it since 1970 when they won from the Union Nationale.

Later, in La Grange a Seraphim, the big, barn-wood panelled brassierie next to his headquarters, Charron had his pencil and paper out trying to figure the possible percentage of the popular vote his party would win and how many seats that could mean.

"I'm not saying we're going to form the next government," he said, "but we should be able to pick up some more seats." The Liberals are starting with 98 seats in the legislature, the PQ six and the UN with 1.

It looks like an interesting eleciton.

One-Sided Farce

In your editorial "Canada Deserves Better" you again criticize the western Canadian bigots on their stand on bilingualism. You say that it is all based on the fact that "the English couldn't stand the sight of the French language on their cereal boxes." You say that this is all that constitutes "French being rammed down our throats". You ignore the recent controversy in Vancouver about the French TV station, and the CRTC's wish to save us from those wicked Americans by this same TV station replacing an American station on the cable system. But this doesn't consist of French being rammed down our throats?

How you can say that western Canada's lack of providing education in French at public expense is the same as Quebec's denial of the right to choose which language your children are to be taught in is beyond me. While western Canada shudders at the enormous expense of bilingualism, what does Quebec do? They go unilingual. Can anyone protest this? If they do you say it is a "feeling of the gut" and not some obvious inequality. If we are to have bilingualism let us have true bilingualism and not this one-sided farce. — Michael Stone, 1207 St. David St.

Caustic Letter

With reference to Squadron-Leader Goode's caustic letter of October 18 in which he belabored teachers for their reactions to recent AIB cutbacks, I would ask:

(a) How does he define "top-earning teachers?"

(b) Is he aware that teachers in S. 61 have been consistently compelled to face compulsory arbitration and that the 11.3 per cent award quoted was decided upon by the above legal process? How can he attribute these negotiations to "grasping union troublemakers?"

(c) Is he aware that teachers have awaited this decision since the beginning of the year? Has the value of the dollar not shrunk somewhat in the interim?

(d) Is he aware that as long ago as fall, 1975, Greater Victoria teachers voted emphatically in favor of equitable wage controls in opposition to a B.C.T.F. recommendation? Here I would emphasize the word "equitable." We surely question the inequity of controls rather than the controls themselves.

(e) Can he point out one solitary educator who "shrieks from the housetops" that he has "been robbed?"

Shame on the Squadron-Leader. His use of hyperbole is more than gross as is his lack of information on the subject.

I suggest that he return to "England's green and pleasant," there to watch his U.K. pension dwindle even more rapidly! —"Quietly-shrieking Educator."

Computer Service

The Victoria Computer Ombudsman Service is currently investigating a complaint that many computerized systems do not recognize special characters in a person's surname. For example, a name such as O'Brien would not include the apostrophe and might be printed as O Brien, instead of O'Brien. Similarly, a hyphenated name such as Ashwood-Smith might be printed simply as Smith.

There is no technological reason for ignoring special characters. It is, however, easier and cheaper to ignore them. Thus, it is a policy decision that decides whether or not special characters should be taken into account.

At this stage of our investigation, we have no information as to how many people with special characters in their surnames object to having these characters ignored by computerized systems. We would therefore appreciate feedback from the public regarding this matter. The Ombudsman Service can be reached by phoning the University of Victoria at 477-6911, local 4750. — Stan Clark, Victoria Computer Ombudsman Service, University of Victoria, Victoria, B.C.

Verbal Garbage?

In writing this letter I am breaking a long standing tradition, a promise to myself not to respond to anything which appears in the media. However your item entitled "Hard Work" which appeared in the October 2, 1976, issue of your newspaper, was a prime example of the ignorance of many in the southern part of this province, to what really exists in the northern two-thirds of British Columbia and deserves response.

Frankly I am very surprised at the fact that a person in the position of the editor of one ,of the leading newspapers of our province could be so ignorant of the facts.

I will overlook most of the verbal garbage of your column, but will point out how misleading and in error your writing really is by concentrating on two items.

Firstly I am appalled that after 10 months of Social Credit Administration you are not aware of the fact that Cyril Shelford is the MLA for Skeena, not Omineca and secondly I would make you aware of the fact that Terrace is in the constituency of Skeena and over 145 miles from being in Omineca. I am almost positive that had you read articles in your own newspaper in the past 10 months you would have been aware of these facts.

I can only hope that as you become more familiar with your responsibility to the people whom you serve as the editor of the Victoria Times and as you get to know British Columbia better your columns will bear more resemblance to the truth. — Jack J. Kempf, MLA, Omineca.

Involvement

The apparent paranoia of the Greater Victoria School Board reached a new 'high' at Monday's meeting when trustees upbraided trustee Lavinia Greenwood for recommending parent advisory committees in four letters to parents.

In 1973, a recommendation for such committees from the minister of education resulted in a memo from the district superintendent to all principals stating that the district encouraged principals to establish community advisory committees. In fact, several schools did establish advisory committees. To the best of my knowledge, this recommendation from the superintendent has not been rescinded.

The present board has made it quite clear that the community is not wanted for advice. That may be their feeling, but the community has every right to be involved in its schools. All taxpayers have the right to demand quality for their tax dollars, just as they demand quality when purchasing anything else.

I heartily agree with Mrs. Greenwood's recommendation but would amend it to include other members of the community, such as pensioners. Schools could and should be the focal point of each community, but community involvement is essential — Mimi Robertson, 1149 Wychbury Ave.

Made in Taiwan

By JACK WASSERMAN
The Sun

The lard-butted Olympians are at it again with a fatuous idiot named Charles Palmer seeking to ban Canada from international sports because our government refused to allow a bunch of professional liars to misrepresent themselves at the Montreal Olympics.

Strong words! But the self-styled Republic of China dumped its "name" for the proverbial 13 pieces of silver in Vancouver last weekend. We'll get to that in a minute.

Wherever your sympathies may lay in the conflict between Mao and Chiang, the fact is that the name Republic of China, as it is used in relation to Taiwan is a palpable phoney. The Canadian government said that Taiwan could participate in the Olympics as Taiwan. The delegation insisted that it represented the Republic of China. Nonsense. Taiwan is an occupied territory.

Two million of Chiang's followers, with all the loot they could carry, took over Taiwan and its 11 million people after they were driven from the mainland.

It may have been sad for those directly involved, including many local residents with their Kuomintang connections, but it wasn't a big deal for most of us until Montreal.

Then we were pistol-whipped internationally by every thin-brained jock and Trudeau hater (not necessarily the same thing) for being rude to the Republic of China, which refused to participate under the terms laid down by the Canadian government. The terms called for honesty. But the self-styled Republic of China had nothing to win.

It was different in Vancouver last weekend. There was $25,000 at stake. The Spectacular Chinese Acrobats of Taiwan, "presented by the Republic of China and Columbia Artists" agreed to appear in Vancouver as "the acrobats of Taiwan". Period. Not even a sponsor.

Their management signed a bond that they wouldn't wave any Nationalist flags on stage, at the risk of not getting paid. There would be no mention of the Republic of China, although they managed to get the words, in Chinese characters, into one advertisement.

I don't begrudge the nationalists taking their best shot. They can call themselves the Republic of the United States of Asia (U.S.A.) for all I care. But there's no more reason for our government to accept that label than there is for us to accept the claim that the (East) German Democratic Republic is democratic.

The point is that the government of Taiwan is prepared to call itself Taiwan when selling shirts or touring show business troupes, or whatever else will make a buck. Any so-called international sport who continues to beat on this particular drum should be looked upon with grave suspicion.

He Worked on the Big Questions

PEIRCE . . . honors came late

MILFORD, Pa. — In a moving act of piety, a busload of philosophers came here on a recent Sunday to honor Charles Sanders Peirce (1839-1914), one of the most original and versatile thinkers ever produced in the Americas.

This is where Peirce — unwelcome in Academe, uncomfortable in government service — retired to work on fundamental questions of the universe. It was also here that his widow, who survived until 1934, kept his ashes on the sitting room mantelpiece.

By the account of neighbors, Mrs. Peirce had added a third floor to their house so there could be a commemorative ball when her husband solved the riddle of the universe. While the ball was never held, thanks to Peirce (prounced purse) the universe he left was not the universe he found.

To honor him, a symposium was held at Johns Hopkins University this year and a C. S. Peirce Bicentennial International Congress was held in Amsterdam.

Philosophers honor him as the founder of pragmatism, logicians for his role in developing symbolic logic, mathematicians for his work in algebra, psychologists for his advances in perception theory, linguists for his contributions to the founding of semiotics (the theory of signs). He was a world figure in astronomy and geodesy, wrote on criminology, religion and history, did translations from four languages, and was a specialist in pronunciation of Shakespearean English.

To Bertrand Russell he appeared "a volcano spouting vast masses of rock, of which some, on examination, turn out to be nuggets of pure gold."

The spouting began in childhood. Peirce's father, America's greatest mathematician, would set math problems, and the son would have to work out the theorems involved, as though Euclid had nver lived. Many a night, beginning at 10 o'clock, father and son would play double-dummy bridge through to sunrise, the father punctiliously criticizing each error.

Young Peirce liked labyrinths, puzzles, mathematical card tricks, chess and code languages. Though left-handed, he could write with both hands. In fact, he could write a question with one hand while writing the answer with the other.

To cure a hopeless love he turned to chemistry at the age of 8. In his senior year at Harvard he ranked 79th of 91, but after graduation and a year with the United States Coast and Geodetic Survey he returned to earn Harvard's first advanced degree in chemistry, summa cum laude.

Back at the Coast and Geodetic Survey, he helped his father — who called God the Divine Geometer — in cartography, and worked as physicist and astronomer. He determined with unprecedented precison the shape of the Milky Way, refined calculations of the earth's ellipticity and computed the meter's length in terms of the wavelength of light. But he did not suffer rules gladly, whether the Survey's on how to do research, or society's on how to pursue a career.

After inheriting some money, he retired here in 1887, and worked part time as consulting chemical engineer, mathematician and inventor, wrote science definitions and did book reviews. Laboring at endless drafts, up to 20 hours at a stretch, he said that he had the persistency of a wasp in a bottle.

No university would give him tenure, and after five years' lecturing on logic at Johns Hopkins he was dismissed, perhaps because the institution's president heard about his lecturer's mistress.

Peirce was treated as a most disposable asset. Even his pragmatism — taken over by William James — was swallowed up and transformed. To dissociate himself from the James version, Peirce took refuge in "pragmaticism," a name he suggested was "ugly enough to be safe from kidnappers."

In his lifetime only one of his books — "Photometric Researchers" — was published, in 1878. "That a man like me cannot possibly in 30 years evolve any thought that is worth a sensible man's two dollars and a half to read will, of course, be the reflection of the great majority," he acknowledged.

After his death, Harvard's philosophy department, which had no place for him while he lived, found room for his papers — disordered and unpaginated. Eight volumes of them were published between 1931 and 1958. The mathematical papers, in four volumes edited by a Hunter College professor emeritus, Carolyn Eisele, have come out this year. Work has also begun on an annotated edition of the completer works, 15 volumes to be edited by Profs. Max H. Fisch and Edward C. Moore, at Indian University-Purdue University at Indianapolis.

London Town Is Falling Down

By SIMON KENT
London Observer

Wealthy Arab in limousine takes advantage of the bargains

The summer drought brought autumn tints to London's parks early this year, but in narrow shopping precincts like Oxford Street, Bond Street, and Chelsea's King's Road the tourist season continues unabated. Around 10 million visitors are expected — that is more than the population of Sweden.

Arab women clad in black, eyes straining out from slits in veils, vie with stout German housewives for bargains in Marks and Spencer, the chain store owned and controlled by predominantly Jewish interests. Clutching green pound notes that are worth not much more than half their international value five years ago the tourists have discovered London as the flea market of Europe.

They come for a long weekend from all over Europe—from Sweden, from Switzerland, from Lower Saxony, even from Spain — because they find the cost of air travel and hotels is more than paid for on purchases of cheap clothes, inexpensive furnishings, and alcohol.

And yet, like the leaves on the trees. London is slowly dying. The city's streets and urban backwaters away from the fashionable spots are emptying of residents and work places.

In the past 15 years, the population of Greater London has dropped by almost a million. Many have fled the city for the same reasons as families escape from North American conurbations: urban decay; poor housing; bad schools, some with a record of violence; declining standards of public transport and hygiene; high prices; and rising crime rates.

Most have gone to new towns — many of which are featureless grey landscapes blotting the countryside; others have opted for smaller cities and country towns. For the past 25 years they have been encouraged to go as a result of official policy to lessen the magnetism of London.

Industry and commerce have gone too. In the space of 15 years almost half-a-million jobs in manufacturing industry have been lost forever, and the trend towards decentralization continues. The huge Midland Bank has moved its administration to northern Sheffield. Insurance companies have gone to the peace of the West Country. The big travel firm of Thomas Cook is moving a hundred miles to Peterborough, in the flat Fenland country.

Nowhere is the decline more marked than in London's East End, which once provided the world's largest and most important port with its every need. Missions to seamen and worthy hostels stand abandoned in memory of their service to a lost cause. Great warehouses once rich with the aroma of spices and tea prop each other up in their desolation.

The River Thames still flows through, but sluggishly and without the ships that until only a year or so ago steamed downstream bound for the southern capes and the oceans. Since 1965, trade through the Port of London has diminished by a third. Endless labor disputes and the onset of containerization led to Rotterdam's mighty growth and expansion.

Public authorities are trying to revitalize dockland by bold new schemes aimed at attracting both residents and industry. But public reaction is lukewarm and the Labor government, faced with headaches elswhere, just cannot afford to be grandiose.

Attempts by some boroughs to inject new life into their districts by encouraging city living have had mixed success. One multi-million venture is the Barbican, a giant residential complex built for posterity, only a few hundred yards' walk from the major financial institutions.

But its costs have soared, and residents who a few years ago arrived with enthusiasm are moving out, leaving apartments empty even before the complex is completed.

The financial district, of course, still thrives, housing an impressive array of international banks, but it is not without serious problems. The number of deals struck on a limp Stock Exchange is about a quarter of the level of business three years ago. Stockbrokers' firms have been forced to merge or close: in the last bear market 4,000 jobs were lost.

First class office blocks are in demand, but there are many thousands of square feet of second-rate offices, vacant and liable to remain so. Some of these buildings are owned by companies in difficulty, including fringe banks only kept solvent by the injection of funds by the Bank of England's self-styled "lifeboat committee."

Sadness at the decline of London as a great industrial centre and world warehouse is not shared by all. Some believe a London with a smaller population would become more civilized. The authorities take the opposite view, saying that fewer people having to pay higher costs for services shared with the entire population is manifestly unfair.

The Tombstone Vote

russell baker

Having no political insights into the Ford-Carter affair worth publishing, I wrote to "Tombstone John" Flanigan asking if I could borrow some of his. Tombstone John is one of the nation's most sagacious political authorities, having spent 48 years voting tombstones for Mayors of Chicago. He now lives in retirement in Pittsburgh. He wrote the following:

The media has got it, as usual, all wrong about this apathy business of the electorate. You send out the pollers, and the pollers say, "Hey, a lot of people out there are not going to vote," and the media right away says, "It's apathy," and pretty soon you're scolding the electorate like they're draft dodgers, and saying "Get in there and do your duty for America and vote, you slackers, or else the republic is up the well-known creek."

This merely shows how much the media knows about the electorate; to wit, nothing. What you got to realize about the electorate is, it's human. This creates a lot of problems, which we always got around in Chicago by voting the tombstones. If you got humans, maybe they vote, maybe they don't. It's a headache. But if you got enough tombstones, you don't have to worry about the humans. Tombstones never refuse to go to the polls.

All right, now you can't get enough tombstones to do a presidential election right, so you got to work with the humans, which is the electorate, and the first thing you look at is their morale. It's like a football team getting ready for the big game. You ask yourself, does this electorate really think it can win next time out? We'll look at their record.

And what do you see? Last time out, this electorate voted 60 per cent for Richard Nixon and Spiro Agnew. That's like losing 63 to 0. On this electorate you got six out of every 10 players who are feeling like bush leaguers at the Presidential ballot box.

What are they thinking? They're thinking, I was lucky to get out of the last game alive, I'd have to be a half-wit to go out there again.

So you got an electorate with no morale, no self-confidence. It's feeling dumb. In over its head. Half of it's so ashamed of its last performance it won't even admit it went to the voting booth. How many people you met lately who voted for Nixon in '72? Four? Five? Six? Makes you wonder what ever happened to McGovern, doesn't it?

And you media people call this apathy? If you hadn't gone to Yale you might know the difference between apathy and fear. What you got here isn't apathy. It's a chicken electorate. The electorate is choked up. It's scared. It's not dodging its duty to the country; it's worried about what it'll do to the country if it pulls another 1972.

It doesn't do any good to browbeat an electorate in this state of mind and tell it it'd better get out there and vote or the country's on the rocks. It thinks voting is exactly what put the country on the rocks last time.

Now what's so wrong with this? Nothing if you ask me. I read in the papers where a professor says everybody ought to have to vote or pay a fine, as this is a democracy and, therefore, people ought to be financially bullied if they don't enjoy it. This merely shows how much professors know about democracy; to wit, nothing.

Look, suppose you take two pale guys like Ford and Carter, not much there to get the glands pumping, the kind of guys that make a lot of people who never pay much attention to this kind of thing say, "Not much there to choose from, so it doesn't make any difference who wins," and you force these people to vote. What do they care? They go up and pull the lever blindfold, like voting for surrogate or clerk of the juvenile court. That isn't an election, it's a coin toss.

Now you take a seasoned voter, a veteran, and put him through something like 1972, and then tell him he's got to get out and vote again in 1976 for the good of the country. And this poor devil, maybe he voted for Johnson in 1964, and Nixon in 1968 and 1972, says to himself, he says: "I voted for Johnson, the peace candidate, in 1964 and got war, and then voted for Nixon, the law-and-order candidate, in 1968 and got crime, and Watergate happened five months before the 1972 election, and I went ahead and voted for Nixon anyhow. Maybe I am over the hill. Maybe it is time for me to hang up the old ballot pencil, but everybody wants me to cast one last vote."

This character is in no condition to vote and shouldn't be forced to, and with his record, only a half-wit would argue that it would be bad for the country if he sat one election out.

One other thing: A small vote sometimes gets better results. We had an election once in which not a single woman in the whole country marked a ballot, and only 39 per cent of the men voted for the winner. His name was Lincoln. I voted his tombstone three or four times.

Victim of Chemicals?

B.C. Hydro Sprayed Herbicides ... And Birth Defects Followed

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

Francine Renaud believes she was the victim of a "chemical assault" in the sunny summer of '72, an assault so insidious that she couldn't even see her attacker.

The invisible presence she accuses but cannot convict — and probably never will — was a herbicide spray used by B.C. Hydro to prevent unwanted growth on a power line right-of-way behind the rented cottage on Galiano Island where Francine lived a peaceful, uncomplicated life with her husband Dan.

Their home is on the lower slope of a small mountain overlooking Montague Harbor. Hydro's power line and access road run over the mountain above them, close to the small catchment area from which they used to draw their domestic water supply.

The area abounds in delicious wild berries, but that year the couple abruptly stopped eating them when they noticed, with a growing sense of unease, that strange things were happening to the vegetation.

Leaves were turning their light side to the sky. Tiny alders with their leaves still in place were "burnt dark," Francine recalls. It was evident that both the right-of-way and the access road had been sprayed. Had some of the wind-borne chemcial also entered their water supply nearby?

Francine conceived in August and her first child, Sarah, was born in May the following year. Another daughter, Tamie, was born in February, 1975.

Both have spina bifida, a congenital malformation of the spine, and although both are now healthy and otherwise normal Francine has been told by a specialist that if any subsequent damage occurs it will do so between the ages of three and eight. Corrective surgery may be needed.

In 1972 a friend of Francine's who lives on Mayne Island conceived her own child one month after Francine first became pregnant. While staying with the couple that fall, she joined them on berry-picking excursions, shared some venison with them, drank their water.

Her child was born with a cranial opening after a difficult birth, and surgery was needed to close the opening. But the child, who had an over-large head and was retarded, died last summer. "It was a very painful experience," says Francine.

Also, within a few months of Sarah's birth, there were two miscarriages on Galiano, including one in which the baby was "very malformed."

Were all of these medical occurrences related? Francine believes they were, and that there's ample reason to suspect Hydro's herbicide spraying program as the culprit. She admits she could be mistaken, but adds: "The whole point is I don't have proof. But I would like to have it proved to me that it was not Hydro's chemicals which caused this."

It is this proof she is seeking in her efforts to have the whole matter investigated by the provincial authorities. Francine has exchanged correspondence with her MLA, Municipal Affairs Minister Hugh Curtis — she admits to a vague fear of dealing direct with Hydro — and expects to hear more later this month after regional health officer Dr. A. S. Arneil has submitted a report to Curtis.

Francine claims that the herbicide used by the crown corporation's spraying crews on Galiano in 1972 was a mixture of 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T.

The latter is akin to the infamous Agent Orange defoliant, millions of gallons of which were sprayed by the U.S. air force on the forests of Vietnam in the five years up to 1970. It is a phenoxy herbicide containing small amounts of an impurity or by-product, the dioxin known as TCDD, which some scientists consider the most toxic substance known to man.

In Vietnam and elsewhere there have been claims that it has caused birth defects and abnormalities, including spina bifida and cleft palate. It has proved teratogenic (malforming) in experiments on animals, but the medico-scientific world seems to be sharply divided between those who consider its controlled use safe and those who condemn it as a sinister hazard to human health, particularly the unborn.

As the controversy surrounding 2,4,5-T heats up, both in Canada and the U.S., many eminent experts are joining environmental groups and concerned citizens in the clamor of protest.

At hearing after hearing, the calm, reassuring testimony of chemical manufacturers, federal-provincial agriculture spokesman, foresters and other vested interests is contrasted with often emotional expressions of fear and suspicion.

Prominent among those warning against the widespread use of such chemicals is Dr. Theodor Sterling, professor of computer science in the faculty of interdisciplinary studies at Simon Fraser University.

In an article last year in the Humanist in Canada, he presented this chilling vision:

"If we do not heed the lessons of the past, we shall have to suffer predictable consequences in the future. In the case of phenoxy herbicides, these consequences will be widespread malformations of newborn babies and an increase in stillbirtr."

And Sterling underlined that Doomsday warning in a letter to Hugh Curtis commenting on Francine's case:

"My service on special commissions and a consultant to Canadian and U.S. agencies has convinced me by now that the struggle has become helpless. The special interests of chemical-agricultural-forest industries have simply shouted down whole voices of reason. Not until a major epidemic of skeletal malformation is upon us, will sanity return. Such an epidemic has now started."

Whom does one believe, Sterling or those on the other side of the fence? And against this confused background of pros and cons, who can possibly say whether Francine's accusations are valid?

Dr. Cortland Mackenzie, of the University of British Columbia, headed B.C.'s Royal Commission on Pesticides and Herbicides, whose inquiry lasted more than two years and cost $1.6 million.

He remembers the appearance by Francine and Dan before the commission, and this is what he had to say to the Times about their suspicions on Hydro's herbicides:

"It is technically possible for these materials to cause not only spina bifida but other defects. There was a possibility, certainly. She came to us with her opinion and we considered that very important."

But proving the allegation is virtually impossible, says Mackenzie, because there are so many other factors which can also cause spina bifida including the presence of mercury, various infectious diseases and a lack of oxygen in the fetus during the early months of pregnancy.

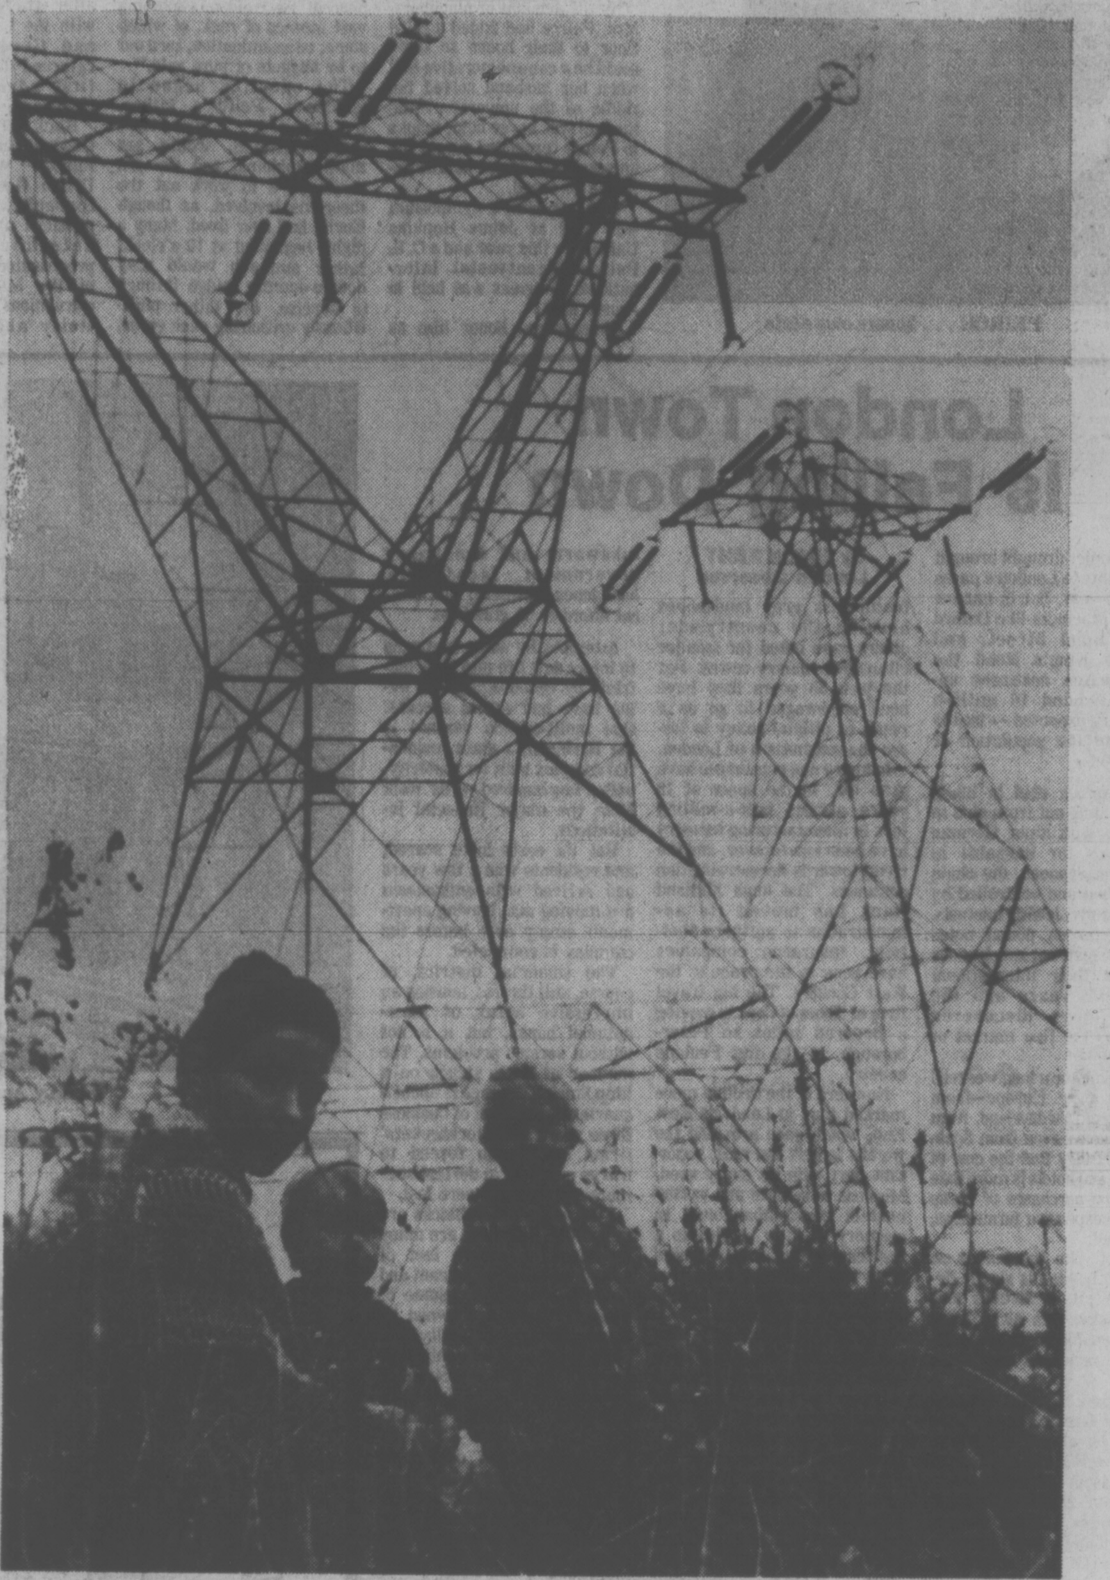
A similar view is held by Dr. Sidney Segal, of UBC's faculty of medicine, who has a special interest in congenital abnormalities. With so many potential causes involved, says Segal, "I don't know of any one case where somebody has said it is due to such and such a cause."

He notes that spina bifida is a "very likely kind of malformation," in that it's the result of incomplete closure of the spinal canal, but no records either in this province or elsewhere in Canada show this type of birth defect on the increase.

The hefty, four-volume report of B.C.'s royal commission, completed in May last year, conveys a general picture of indecision and uncertainty, supporting neither the users and makers of herbicides nor the doubters.

The commissioners observed that there are two possible types of damage to unborn children: one to the cells that will at some future time form the individual, the other actual damage to the fetus by materials acting on it prior to birth.

"There is some evidence that both of these actions might occur from pesticides. There is very little evidence that either of these things occurs as a result of actual pesticides used in B.C.," they stated.



MERELY UGLY to most people, B.C. Hydro's power lines have a more sinister significance for Galiano Island resident Mrs. Francine Renaud, who believes Hydro's use of herbicides near her home resulted in her children — Sarah, 3, and 18-month-old Tamie — being born with spinal defects.

Similarly, they found no evidence of any "epidemic" of spina bifida or other type of birth defect in the province, and a pediatrician specializing in spina bifida testified that there was "no significant regional variation" which could indicate the influence of some environmental factor.

(Completely contrary to Dr. Sterling's claims, the commission concluded that the provincial rate for spina bifida — about 1.5 per 1,000 births, live or stillborn — has remained "relatively stable" since 1955. There were 32 cases that year, 21 in 1972 when Francine conceived Sarah).

But after reciting these and other reassuring facts, the commission's report goes on to raise certain basic, nagging doubts.

In referring to birth defects found among experimental animals exposed to phenoxy herbicides, particularly dioxin, it says:

"If a similar process is occurring in the human population some infants with various malformations are, perhaps, being born. If this is happening our data collection system may not be sensitive enough to detect their presence in the population.

"B.C. has one of the most advanced registration systems for defects of this type in North America. It is possible, nevertheless, that a very small number of malformed children in the province have been damaged by herbicides, but their numbers are so small they are not distinguishable . . ."

Again and again, as the royal commission's report unfolds in relation to Francine's story, the questions pop up. Could Sarah and Tamie be two of those "lost" statistics that the system never picked up because it is, at best, imperfect?

While Mackenzie and his fellow-commissioners gave tacit approval to the continued use of herbicides, ("The overwhelming majority of evidence gathered indicates that herbicides, when properly used, constitute an extremely small danger to man, other animals and the environment in general") they also found cause for concern.

It was apparent, they said, that the control of unwanted vegetation on rights-of-way "has not been consistently carried out in a manner which gives adequate consideration to the potential dangers due to misuse and overuse of the chemicals."

And there was even a mild admission of guilt from Hydro itself. In a brief to the commission, Robin Garner the authority's environmental superintendent said: "We have to admit that in the past there have been misuses or poor application techniques of herbicides by B.C. Hydro personnel."

The commission was told that in 1973 Hydro proposed using 30,000 pounds of "active ingredient" — mostly 2,4-D and 2,4,5-T — on its electrical transmission system.

In its report it recommended that the application techniques should include various built-in safeguards, such as minimum distances from flowing bodies of water and increased "buffer" zones where domestic water intakes are involved.

Peter Mosby, Hydro's vegetation management supervisor in Vancouver, told the Times most of these guidelines had in fact been part of Hydro's standard operating procedures for a number of years.

He admitted, however, that no action had resulted from another key recommendation in the royal commission's report, which urged that rights-of-way earmarked for spraying be signposted "at frequent distance intervals" at least 48 hours prior to the anticipated date of spraying.

Mosby said some trial signs were prepared and discussed, but the provincial government's Inter-departmental Pesticide Committee, which approves pesticide and herbicide spraying applications by various provincial agencies, "thought they would do more harm than good."

He explained it is standard practice to notify residents living close to rights-of-way that are to be sprayed. Yet Francine insists there was no notification of any kind in the 1972 program on Galiano.

In turn, Mosby contradicts one of her basic contentions — that the chemical used near her home was 2,4,5-T: "We double-checked the records and in 1972 we didn't spray any 2,4,5-T on Galiano."

The only substance used, he said, was 2,4-D, which doesn't contain any of the dioxin TCDD.

Perhaps following the example of former Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrumm, who publicly drank a glass of 2,4,5-T six years ago in a stunt to allay concerns, several provincial officials contacted seemed anxious to dispell the general belief that it is a dangerous chemical.

Mosby echoed a health official's assurance that 2,4,5-T has changed "quite remarkably from the days when it was used in Vietnam.

Restrictions have been placed on manufacturers to limit the amount of dioxin contaminant to .1 part per million of the actual active material, he said.

By contrast, the chemical produced in the 1960s allowed up to 30 parts per million of the toxic residue. "So in effect the material contains only one-three-hundredth of the contamination in the material used in Vietnam," he said.

In addition, Mosby stressed that the U.S. air force did not bother to dilute the substance, whereas Hydro dilutes one gallon of concentrate in 100 gallons of water — rendering it 30,000 times less toxic.

Testimony before the royal commission claimed that B.C.'s pesticide controls are "quite sophisticated," that federal-provincial co-operation in this field works smoothly and that existing legislation provides adequate safeguards for human health, wildlife and the environment in general. Interviews with provincial officials produced a reiteration of this view.

Baynes Vance, who is head of the agriculture department's pesticide control branch and also chairs the inter-departmental pesticide committee, said all departments and agencies using pesticides and herbicides have to submit their proposals to the committee.

"Several hundred" such programs are processed every year, and many are closely monitored.

Perhaps anxious to avoid any impression of an automatic rubber-stamping approval system, Vance said: "There is quite a bit of input (from the committee) as far as modification and even denials."

But invironmentalists take a jaundiced view of the approval process in B.C. Thelma McAdam, a Port Coquitlam resident who has been vocal in the fight against pesticides and herbicides, and has investigated Francine's story, says with the various vested interests represented on the committee it's like "asking the robber to mind the bank for you."

"Are they going to say these things are harmful when they want to go on using them?"

In ploughing through the four volumes of the royal commission's report, an abiding impression left with the layman is that not enough long-term research has been done to draw any firm conclusions on the safety — otherwise — of herbicides.

As chairman Mackenzie said last week: "We felt the data base, the score keeping, wasn't as good as we would have liked."

To fill this need the commission recommended, among other things, that the provincial health surveillance function be expanded "to include the ability to cross-reference its data on disease, particularly cancer and congenital defects, with environmental factors."

(The latter would include data on all toxic, or potentially toxic, pollutants which are present in the environment. If the correlation of one set of information to the other showed up any significant pattern or trend, that would be thoroughly investigated).

The commission said far more emphasis should be placed on studies of the "long-term exposure of a large population to low doses of suspect toxic substances."

Such research should be carried out in B.C.'s universities and medical centres, with funding provided partly by the provincial government.

Given the fears, suspicions and accusations that surround the whole issue, it would be reasonable to assume that the advice would be readily accepted.

But Macktnzie says: "I see no evidence that they (the recommendations) have been acted on. A remarkable number of people don't even seem to know the report exists." (Among them, as the Times reporter found in starting to investigate the subject, was the reference section of Victoria's public library. Not only did it not have the report, but the librarian said he had never heard of it).

Somewhat resignedly, Mackenzie added: "It (the report) seems to have followed the fate of many royal commission reports . . ."

Why isn't this type of health study being conducted in B.C.?

Dr. John Smith, head of special services in the provincial health department and also a member of the inter-departmental pesticide committee, says long-term studies are "tremendously demanding" in terms of expertise, money, time and facilities.

But research in this field is being undertaken by the federal health protection department in Ottawa, he says, and "we have to lean fairly heavily on the help they can give us."

From a health point of view, Smith said the main point which concerns him is that every precaution is taken to ensure herbicides are not applied "were there are water supplies and people living."

"I think if the regulations are written down and adhered to, and if where necessary we follow up with water sampling, then we are doing probably the best we can do," he added.

The best we can do . . . but is that best good enough? If even a mere handful of children in B.C. are born each year with physical defects caused by careless use of potentially dangerous herbicides, isn't that a handful too many?

Perhaps more than any other comment in the royal commission's report, this simple statement of the gaps in our knowledge must give pause for thought:

"No study has been perfect. Doubt must remain. Pesticides may have long-term effects."

For Francine and Dan, those doubts will be uppermost in their minds as their daughters grow up.

Gobbledygook Read On and On

Victoria aldermen are used to plowing through some pretty long-winded and turgid prose, but one officialese shocker stumped Ald. Ron McKenzie on Thursday.

It was a sentence 440 words long.

"What does it mean?" inquired the bewildered alderman.

But he said the document deals with an important business transaction between municipalities, and he doubts whether a simpler way of expressing it could be found

For ardent followers of the fine art of gobbledygook, a Times analysis of this prize piece of verbosity shows that it occupies 39 lines and contains 11 comas, four "thereof's," three "provided that's" and three "in respect of's."

Here is the full unabridged ext, and the interpid reader is advised to take a deep breath before submerging:

"A participating municpality that provides premises for a branch library pursuant to clause 4 may in each and every year during which it so provides such premises set off against the amount for which it would otherwise be liable in respect of its share of the net operating cost in the then-current year by virtue of the preceding clauses an amount equal to the sum of any and all amounts paid or payable by it in such year by way of rental for such premises or, if the municipality shall be the owner thereof, an amount equal to the annual rental value of the same which annual rental value shall in the absence of an agreement between all of the municipal assessors for the time being of the city and each of the participating municialities as to the amount therof be deemed to be an amount equal to twenty per centum (20 per cent) of the assessed value of the lands and improvements comprising the said premises as shown on the revised assessment roll of teh municipality for that year, PROVIDED that in the case of the branch libraries constructed, furnished and equpped by Saanich and Oak Bay pursuant to the above recited agreement of the 31st day of August A.D. 1972, there shall be taken into account the contributions made by and on behalf of the city toward the capital cost thereof in determining the annual rental value thereof for the purposes of this agreement and accordingly the annual rental value of the said branch libraries, shall, for the year 1976, be deemed to be the sum of FORTY-EIGHT THOUSAND FOUR HUNDRED AND EIGHTY-FIVE DOLLARS ($48,485) in the case of the Seymour Branch Library constructed in Saanich, SIXTY-FOUR THOUSAND NINE HUNDRED AND TWENTY-EIGHT DOLLARS ($64,928) in respect of the McClung Branch Library constructed in Saanich and TWENTY-EIGHT THOUSAND FIVE HUNDRED AND FIFTY-SIX DOLLARS (28,556) in the case of the Branch Library so constructed in Oak Bay, and in 1977 and subsequent years the rental values of "the said branches shall be adjusted to reflect changes in the fair rental values arrived at fo the year 1976, PROVIDED that (hang in there, folks, we're getting to the end) in the absence of agreement amongst the parties assessors the figures suggested by the B.C. Assessment Authority shall be accepted as binding, and PROVIDED THAT Saanich municipality shall only be entitled to a credit in respect of the McClung Branch for that proportion of the year 1976 after the branch library has been opened for use."

The Guiness Book of World Records notes that a sentence more than twice as long as the library one — 958 words — appears in cities of the Plain by Marcel Proust.

But that, in turn, was of modest length compared with a sentence of 3,153 words, including 86 semi-colons and 390 commas, in the History of the Church of Good by Sylvester Hassell (the surname seems appropriate) of Wilson, N.C., circa 1884.

Which, in turn, was surpassed by the report of the President of Columbia University, 1942-43, with a sentence of 4,284 words.

Nature Study Wins

An outdoor environmental studies program developed by the department of recreation and travel industry has been judged the best in North America by the American Association of Conservation information Officers.

The program, entitled "Encore," is designed to assist teachers and outdoor groups to develop outdoor study programs and to discover natural systems in their immediate surroundings.

Barry Kelsey, of the department's education and information branch, said the study program is now available to schools, outdoor groups and individuals.

'So far we have distributed about 500 environmental study kits, which include a set of 256 activity cards covering a wide variety of topics, an introductory book and a catalogue of some nature sites in B.C.," he said.

Tremor Hits

SAN SALVADOR (Reuter) — An earth tremor shook San Salvador, the El Salvador capital, Wednesday but there was no immediate report of injuries or damage. The local observatory said the tremor registered between three and four on the 12-point Mercalli scale and the epicenter was in the Pacific Ocean, about 40 miles south of San Salvador.

School Opened

The new Torquay Elementary school in Gordon Head was officially opened Thursday with Greater Victoria School trustee Dr. Hal Knight calling on parents to get involved in school affairs.

"You can have a significant role in shaping this new school and even your new community. It is not only desireable but urgent. I suggest you work at developing a feeling of community, in getting to know one another," he said.

The school will be the last built in Gordon Head for some time, he said, but suggested the building could become the focus for community activity.

CP Rail Laborers Brawl

CALGARY (CP) — A CP Rail spokesman Thursday confirmed that a brawl involving about 60 temporary laborers on a track ballast gang occurred Tuesday night at Daysland, Alta., 50 miles southeast of Edmonton.

CHQT Radio in Edmonton said earlier three men were taken to hospital and many more slightly injured when members of the work crew attacked each other with axe handles, crowbars and rocks.

Police said the men in hospital were in satisfactory condition with cuts and bruises.

The incident started about 9 p.m. Tuesday after a white worker painted a racial slur on a railway bunk car occupied by workers of East Indian extraction. Windows in railway cars and several private automobiles were smashed.

The CP Rail spokesman said about half the 60 laborers in the 90-man crew were of East Indian orgin and the crew had been notified it would be disbanded at the end of the month.

"Immediately after the incident, the crew was disbanded and permanent staff r-mained at the site to clean up," he said.

He said preliminary investigation showed a former laborer on the chew returned to one of the bunk cars and stayed overnight with a friend, against company regulations.

"The incident was precipitated by this former employee and he has been charged with trespassing."

Police, who said it was a wonder someone was not killed or maimed, said other charges may be laid.

An investigation by RCMP and CP Rail's investigation department continues.

PARISIENNE:
The revolutionary, evolutionary automobile.

The revolution begins—and full-size Parisienne is a whole new size. An evolutionary full-size. Changing times call for improved fuel efficiency —better gas mileage in every size of car. And for '77, the all-new, full-size Parisienne rates at 28 and 20 miles per gallon in highway and city tests respectively—based on Transport Canada approved test methods for Parisienne with a 305 CID 2-bbl. V8, automatic transmission and standard axle.* '77 Parisienne is a full-size Mileage Maker!
What else is new?
There's more headroom and all-around comfort.
There's more knee and leg room in the rear.
Full-foam seats are softer and full-width.
The trunk is bigger and has more useable space.
There's increased use of zinc-rich primers, galvanized metals and other anti-corrosive materials.
Plus new diagnostic connectors allowing for many different electrical service checks and tests.
And all this comes with the handling, riding comfort and quiet traditional to full-size Pontiacs.
Pontiac challenges the competition.
Visit your Pontiac dealer and test drive a full-size Mileage Maker: Parisienne, Catalina or Laurentian.
It's a new world.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined again Friday amid news signs of sluggishness in the economy.

Analysts noted disappointment with the market's downturn Thursday despite the news of the smallest rise in the consumer price index in five months.

Friday, the commerce department reported that new orders for durable goods fell 3.1 per cent in September for their third decline in a row.

The news provided further evidence of a recent slackening in the pace of the recovery from the recession.

Gardner-Denver, also active, slumped 1¾ to $18½. The company, which produces industrial equipment, reported sharply lower third quarter earnings.

Abitibi Paper was off ⅜ at $10½, Imperial Oil A ⅜ at $19½, Bank of Montreal ⅛ at $15⅛ and Alcan ⅜ at $24⅛. Interprovincial Pipe Line A was up ¼ at $14⅛.

No Answer For Petrosar

CORUNNA, Ont. (CP) — Petrosar Ltd. officials did not receive an answer to their application to buy western oil when they met with the Alberta Petroleum Marketing Commission in Edmonton, Angus Fraser, the company's public relations manager, says.

Premier Peter Lougheed told the Alberta legislature last week that Petrosar will not be approved as a buyer.

Fraser said the company believes the announcement does not prevent Petrosar from obtaining supplies from a third party through purchasers already approved by the marketing commission.

Export Boost Stressed

VANCOUVER (CP) — Canada should encourage the development of large, specialized companies to penetrate specific export markets, says J. Page Wadsworth, chairman of the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce.

He told a Board of Trade meeting that "substantial improvements in exports are more likely to come from the success of large, specialized organizations than small ones."

Instead of encouraging such specialized, efficient industries, he said, "we have blundered along making mistakes over and over, subsidising, protecting, rescuing and preserving, regardless of cost, industries and lines of production in which we are not and cannot be truly competitive and truly efficient."

"Partly because of our tariff structure, we make too many things at too high a cost for too small a market."

Canada has made it difficult for companies to merge and establish large specialized units, Wadsworth said.

Data Links Grain-Fed Beef and Cancer

The head of the B.C. Cancer Control Agency says there is laboratory evidence which links eating of grain-fed beef to cancer of the colon, largest cause of cancer deaths in the province.

Dr. Tom Hall termed the evidence as "highly suggestive" in a television interview. Later he said cancer of the colon, which accounts for 800 death a year in B.C., would be drastically reduced if people cut down consumption of animal fats and increased the amount of fibre in their diet.

He said that means more bran and less milk, cream and eggs and less lamb, pork and beef, or a switch to leaner grass-fed beef. Most beeef is finished on grain, that is, fattened on a grain diet in the two months before slaughter.

Hall said there is a lot of data linking diet to cancer. Scientists believe that digestion of animal fats produces compounds which change types of micro-organisms populating the bowel. The new organisms are thought to produce cancer-causing substances.

The colon is the lower part of the bowel and incidence of colon cancer in Bluawayo, Africa, where very little animal fat is consumed, is 60 times less than in Saskatchewan, Hall said.

Research results are being forwarded to federal health authorities. In the television interview Hall suggested meat should carry a warning level.

He said later he isn't suggesting a switch to a Bulawayo diet. People in that area have 171 times the chance of developing liver cancer as Canadians, a result it is believed, of toxins produced from fungal spoilage of ground nuts.

CP and Guild Talks Resume

OTTAWA (CP) — Labor Minister John Munro said today he has appointed a top official in his department to mediate a continuing contract dispute between The Canadian Press news agency and members of the Canadian Wire Service Guild.

Munro told a group of demonstrating reporters outside Parliament that he has named Tom Eberlee, assistant-deputy labor minister, to resume talks between the two sides on an "urgent basis." Negotiations, which broke off in mid-August, had begun last November.

The labor minister made the comments following a 75-minute meeting with John Dauphinee, general manager of the news agency, and several newspaper publishers.

Publishers of the country's 108 daily papers finance the operations of CP through yearly assessments.

During the meeting, about 40 reporters from Canadian Press bureaus in Ottawa and Montreal were joined by some cabinet ministers, MPs and other reporters from the Parliamentary Press Gallery for a demonstration outside the Centre Block on Parliament Hill.

Environment Minister Romeo LeBlanc, Iona Campagnolo, minister of state for fitness, former prime minister John Diefenbaker and the former New Democratic Party Leader, T. C. Douglas, were among parliamentarians who joined the demonstration.

Demonstrators carried signs demanding an end to the year-long dispute through arbitration.

MP Questions Newspaper Pact

OTTAWA (CP) — A New Democratic Party MP suggested Thursday the possibility that two large newspaper companies might be in collusion to avoid competition in a number of cities across Canada.

Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville) made the suggestin to Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Anthony Abbott in the Commons after reading into the record a statement by the executive editor of the Ottawa Citizen that suggested it has an agreement with its competitor, the Ottawa Journal, to keep the market profitable for each.

The Citizen is owned by Southam Press Ltd. and The Journal by FP Publications Ltd. The two newspapers have an agreement that one will not publish if the other cannot publish because of labor problems.

The Citizen withheld publication twice in the last week after The Journal said that it could not put out a paper because of a slowdown by printers, members of the International Typographical Union (ITU) which is in a legal position to strike at both papers.

MLA Fights Developers

NORTH COWICHAN — Cowichan-Malahat MLA Barbara Wallace is fighting a bid by Timbercrest Estates to remove 70 acres of land here from the agricultural land reserve.

In a letter to provincial Secretary Grace McCarthy, Mrs. Wallace opposes the move on the grounds that "it is contrary to the concept of the Land Commission Act to release a 70-acre plot of Class 1 and 2 land in what is a predominantly rural area."

The New Democratic Party MLA was at a meeting of North Cowichan Council at the invitation of Mayor Gerry Smith when her letter to McCarthy was revealed.

Mrs. Wallace said in her letter that the land is still being used for grazing and part of it near Somenos Creek is "subject to flooding and quite unsuitable for development purposes."

Several appeals by Timbercrest Estates to the land commission have failed and chairman Gary Runka informed the , municipality, whilch supports the subdivision, that it could approach the cabinet directly for exclusion of the property from the land reerve act. Because it has a heavy investment in servicing the land, North Cowichan has decided to appeal to the cabinet.

Directors of Timbercrest include Herb Doman, J. R. Abercrombie, George J. Schmidt, Dr. Owen Gloster, Kenneth Hill, Ian Danvers, John Chapman Davie and David R. Williams.

Timbercrest and North Cowichan have been trying to have the area excluded since the inception of the land act in 1971 and in 1974 a brief on the matter was submitted to the land commission by the municipality.

The North Cowichan brief was prepared by Williams, whose firm, Williams and Davie, act as the municipal lawyers.

Mayor Smith said this week he was unaware that Williams or Davie were Timbercrest directors.

"We haven't got time or really care to check who the directors are of every company we deal with," he said.

Duncan 'Cleans' Bylaws

DUNCAN — A 20-year-old bylaw regulating store hours in Duncan will be repealed by city council in what Mayor Ken Paskin describes as a "housecleaning" move.

"We are just doing some housecleaning as far as our bylaws are concerned and this one is out of date," he said, referring to a 1957 regulation requiring stores to close at 6 p.m. Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Saturday, noon Thursday and 9 p.m. Friday.

Paskin said it has been council policy for several years to allow merchants to set their own hours of business.

CAMOSUN EYES CABLE

Camosun College Radio Society is investigating introducing community radio to Greater Victoria via expanded cable television.

Spokesman Kerm Carlson, of CAMO radio, said Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission approval would have to be granted in order for the programs to be carried on the cable service offered by Victoria Cablevision Ltd.

The cable company will begin offering five new channels to subscribers with mid-channel coverter attachments after Nov. 1. It also has been granted permission to carry FM radio programming of CFRO, Vancouver Co-operative Radio.

Carlson said CAMO has had closed-circuit, day-long programming at Camosun College for the past three years. The "station" does not broadcast a wireless signal and therefore it cannot be heard outside the college campus.

If granted permission to connect with cablevision, CAMO envisages an expanded format to add to its program of news, editorial comment, music and features.

"We want to get to the public because there are many ways the commercial radio doesn't," Carlson said.

Puget Fish War Rioting Feared

SEATTLE (AP) — The state is preparing felony charges and the federal government dispatched the FBI in the wake of an escalation of Washington's "Fish War," the latest battle in which was a waterborne riot with burning boats and tear gas.

"If we don't get the kind of protection we need, I guess we'll see riots. We don't want that. No fish is worth anyone's life," Lumni Indian leader Forest Finley said of the federal action.

But Puget Sound Gillnetters Association president Phil Sutherland said his group resents "fedeal intervention in what is a state issue."

Whether it's a state or federal problem may be the key to the solution. "The basic problem we've got is one of ultimately determining which law it is that governs — whether federal or state law and how the town interrelate, I think when we do that we'll have more consistant response from state and federal courts," Gov. Dan Evans told a news conference Thursday.

The dispute stems from a two-year-old ruling by U.S. District Judge George Boldt, who said treaties dating back to the latee 1800s gave Indian tribes the right to catch at least half of each harvestable salmon run, increasing Indian catches and decreasing those of already hard-pressed non-Indian commercial fishermen.

Evans said the state plans to get tough with lawbreakers on the Sound. He said the state is in the process of making felony charges against those involved in endangering the lives of patrol officers.

"Several fisheries patrol officers were almost drowned a few weeks ago as a direct result of a deliberate attempt by the gillnetters to harass fisheries patrol officers, running at the boats, ramming the boats, shooting off rifles . . . to harass the officials."

A Coast Guard cutter and helicopter were called in early Thursday to help outmanned fisheries officers in six patrol boats. "They were making high-speed passes at our boats, trying to get us to collide with each other," said Bruce Gruett of the state Departmnt of Fisheries.

No injuries were reported and the department filed no charges immediately.

The governor refers to the seagoing lawbreakers as "an outlaw percentge of gillnetters" and adds with compassion the majority of gillnetters are frustrated and "deserve to be frustrated because many of them are losing their livelihood."

TANKER RULING APPEALED

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Attorney-General Slade Gorton said Thursday he has filed a request for appeal in a United States district court case in which Washington's law banning supertankers from Puget Sound was declared unconstitutional.

Monday is the deadline for filing the notice that the state intends to take the case to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Assistant Attorney-General Charles Murphy said an alternative appeal is being prepared for the U.S. 9th circuit court of appeals in San Francisco in case the supreme court appeal is rejected.

The case at issue was decided by a three-judge panel Sept. 24. The court ruled that the state law, which would have banned tankers of more than 125,000 deadweight tons from entering Puget Sound, was in conflict with federal law and thus unconstitutional.

Damage $250,000

COQUITLAM (CP) — Damage was estimated at $250,000 Wednesday after a four-alarm fire raged through a three-storey apartment block Tuesday. There were no injuries but 12 tenants were left homeless.

Tonight's Debate the Decider

WASHINGTON (WP) — Both Gerald Ford and Jimmy Carter have been told by their top advisers they can win the presidnetial election if they avoid a serious misstep in tonight's final television debate.

A Gallup Poll completed Tuesday and released Thursday night said the race has stabilized, at least temporarily, with a 6-point Carter advantage, but said the debate "could play an important, even decisive, role in the outcome . . . in view of the softness of voter support.

The Gallup organization said the sampling of 1,032 registered voters gave Carter a 47-to-41 per cent edge over Ford, with 2 per cent for independent candidate Eugene McCarthy and 10 per cent for other candidates and undecided.

That is essentially unchanged from the 48-to-42 lead Carter opened in a Gallup Poll taken two to five days after the second debate on Oct. 6, which most voters judged he had won.

Earlier, Ford had moved to within 2 points of Carter, after winnning the voters' verdict in their first debate on Sept. 23.

The rivals spent much of Thursday going through abridgements of their briefing books for the first two debates, preparing for their confrontation at 6:30 PDT Friday at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va.

But the word from both the White House and Plains, Ga., was that the Republican and Democratic nominees were taking a more relaxed approach to this final confrontation.

Car Firms Fight Mileage Boost

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. automobile industry is fighting a proposed requirement that would force it to boost average gasoline mileage to 27.5 miles per gallon by 1985.

Led by General Motors, the giant of the industry, officials call the mandatory fuel economy proposals "misleading," "irresponsible," "reckless," "contrived" and too costly.

Their criticisms were heard Thursday by representatives of the transportation department, the energy research and development administration, the federal energy administration and the environmental protection agency.

Those agencies and the National Science Foundation provided the task force that drafted the proposals.

In its draft report the task force called for cutting 1985 fuel consumption below 1975 levels by 40 to 50 per cent for automobiles, 25 to 40 per cent for light trucks and 30 per cent for heavy transport trucks.

Jail Segregates Kidnap Suspects

FRESNO, Calif. (UPI) — The three suspects in the kidnapping of 26 Chowchilla children and their bus driver will be segregated from other inmates in the Fresno County Jail next week during a pre-trial hearing.

Sheriff Harold McKinney said Thursday he decided Fred Woods, 24, James Schoenfeld, 24, and his brother, Richard, 22, will be held on the jail's fourth floor away from the other inmates because of the nature of the charges against them. He said inmates accused of crimes involving children were usually segregated.

The three will be at the jail during a change of venue hearing beginning Wednesday.

FTC REMEDY: SELL

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Federal Trade Commission Thursday ordered two big drug companies which have merged to sell certain lines of business so that competition can be assured in the marketing of such things as cough drops and thyroid drugs.

Involved in the case are Warner-Lambert Co., and the firm with which it merged, Parke, Davis and Co.

The FTC ruled last April that the combination "may substantially lessen competition" in five markets — thyroid preparations, cough remedies, cough drops and lozenges, normal serum albumin, and tetanus immune globulin.

Instead of ordering Warner-Lambert to divest itself completely of Parke, Davis, however, the FTC earlier this year said it would solve the case by seeking lesser remedies.

Thursday's order requires Warner-Lambert to sell within 12 months, subject to FTC approval, its assets to a purchaser who will then become an "effective marketer" of thyroid preparations presently being sold by Parke, Davis.

B-52s TO SPY ON RUSSIAN NAVAL FLEET

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. commanders plan to start using B-52 strategic bomber fleet to watch Russian naval movements in the Indian Ocean, according to a senior air force official.

The official said the head of the Strategic Air Command, Gen. Russell D. Dougherty, and the navy's commander in chief for the Pacific area, Adm. Maurice F. Weisner, are working out the best means of using B-52s, based on Guam, for the reconnaisance purpose.

The program would involve the first regular flights of the giant bombers over the strategic Indian Ocean.

Jackson Wants Oil Trades

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — Sen. Henry M. Jackson has proposed oil trades with Canada as a method of obtaining the equivalent of Alaskan oil without the hazards of new pipelines or supertanker traffic.

Jackson, campaigning for re-election here on Wednesday, said three of the state's four oil refineries can't process the high-sulphur Alaskan crude anyway.

He said that Alaskan oil can be traded to Canada, with shipments going to Kitimat and sent from there to Canadian refineries equipped to handle it.

In exchange, he said, Canada would continue to supply Washington refineries with oil from Albertan wells.

Among plans now being considered for dealing with Alaskan oil is one to build a supertanker terminal at Port Angeles. A 1,500-mile pipeline would run from the terminal to the Midwest in a project costing $2 billion.

Various governmental entities have opposed that plan, but the state has supported it because it would mean that tankers would not have to ply Puget Sound.

Jackson said he plans to meet with Canadian officials, probably by December, to discuss steps towards a treaty that would assure complete co-operation in an oil exchange.

He said another step necessary to make his plan work is to assure bonding companies that their money invested in Alaskan pipelines is safe from losses that might result from international conflicts.

Bellingham Aims At Massage Parlors

BELLINGHAM, Wash. (AP) — An effort will be made to shut down massage parlors here using a statute against nuisances, Whatcom County Prosecuting Atty. Dave McEachran says.

McEachran said his office and police have begun an investigation of possible prostitution at the parlors operating in the city area.

The nuisance statute has been used against a drive-in movie theatre which showed pornographic movies, he said.

"Criminally, it's next to impossible to close down a massage parlor," said McEachran. "It's like beating our heads into the wall. You end up arresting individual girls while the business goes on."

Instead of criminal prosecutions, he said, he will be seeking civil law "using the theory that these places are a public nuisance we can shut down. Any lewd acts will do it."

FIREARMS EXPERT TESTIFIES

NANAIMO (CP) — Firearms expert Bob Luco testified in British Columbia Supreme Court Thursday that bullets found in the bodies of James Oldfield and Pamela Jones were too damaged to identify as coming from a specific weapon.

Luco, a former RCMP officer working in the Vancouver RCMP crime lab, was giving testimony at the trial of James Rodriguez Melendez, charged with murder in the Oct. 24, 1975, fatal shooting of the pair.

Rodriguez, 22, formerly of Duncan, was charged with the murders after the bodies of Oldfield and Jones were found in mid-November of 1975 near the North Cowichan Municipal Dump.

The three had lived together at a house near the dump. The shootings are alleged to have occurred at the house.

Luco said a bullet casing found in the house matched a gun Rodriguez bought in Victoria and another matched a gun owned by Gerald Frank, a witness at the trial.

He said the bullets found in the bodies and on the floor of the house were too damaged to be specifically identified but he eliminated Frank's weapon as being used in the shooting.

Also giving testimony at the trial was S. Sgt. B. D. Flink, a handwriting expert who commented on two cheques earlier witnesses said were cashed by Rodgriguez.

He said one was signed by Oldfield and the other in a manner similar to Jones' handwriting. But he said the body of the Jones cheque had handwriting characteristics of Rodriguez.

"I cannot eliminate that it was she who wrote it (the signature)," he said.

Fatigue Cernetic's Reason For Leaving His Pen Post

VANCOUVER (CP) — Dragan Cernetic said Thursday that fatigue was the main reason for his request for transfer from his job as director of the much-troubled British Columbia Penitentary.

"Four years in a maximum-security institution is enough for anyone," he said in an interview.

Cernetic was assigned to a new job in Canadian Penitentiary Service regional headquarters Wednesday on his return to duty this week after a sick leave that kept him away from the prison during a riot and hostage-taking incident last month.

Commenting on the institution that has been the scene of several violent hostage takings and riots, Cernetic said: "The pen should have been torn down 25 years ago when the decision was first made to do it.

"However, such a public statement should be backed up with sufficient funds to provide a place of manageable size and a proper location for staff."

He said his first requests for a transfer out of the prison began informally six months ago, and a formal request was made in August. At the end of a state of emergency in September prior to the rioting, Cernetic said he again formally sought immediate action on his request.

He said the duties involved in his new job have yet to be determined, but he won't work in a maximum security prison.

Bob Swan, formerly security director at the new Mission prison, has been named acting director of the penitentiary.

Meanwhile Cernetic's removal was greeted with regret Thursday by members of the Citizens' Advisory Committee, a group working for prisoners' rights.

Dr. Edwin Lipinski, chairman of the committee, said he was liked by the prisoners. But he added that like all prison directors Cernetic had been subject to criticism from the prison population.

"He is a very competent and reliable individual," said Dr. Lipinski.

Douglas Customs Boosted

OTTAWA (CP) — Extra customs officers have been hired on both sides of the border at Douglas to cope with the surge of British Columbia residents going to the United States to shop, Revenue Minister Monique Begin told the Commons Wednesday.

Miss Begin made the comment when asked by Bill Clarke (PC — Vancouver-Quadra) if she would immediately conduct an investigation "into the gross understaffing which has left over half the gates unmanned at peak traffic periods" and caused delays of up to three hours at the border crossing.

The minister acknowledged that there have been numerous complaints about the delays, which she said were caused by the influx of Canadians going to the U.S. when various B.C. stores were closed by strikes.

PUBLICITY SUFFICIENT PENALTY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Donald Frank Souter, of Burnaby, who admitted the illegal solicitation of a woman for sexual purposes was given an absolute discharge in provincial court Thursday.

The charge — believed the first of its kind in Canada — was laid after Souter propositioned a policewoman posing as a prostitute Sept. 21.

Judge Douglas Hume said the publicity was sufficient punishment for Souter but similar cases in the future could result in fines or jail.

Pen Site Chosen

SURREY (CP) — Federal authorities and municipal council have agreed in principle on a site for a $15 million maximum-security penitentiary in this Vancouver-area community, a spokesman for the penitentiary service said Thursday.

The spokesman said public hearings would be held in the municipality in December before final agreement is reached.

The site being considered is located near the Langley boundary and was purchased by the municipality for future industrial development.

Council had given tentative approval May 10 to a $27 million prison, prison staff training centre and RCMP college. The proposal does not include supplementary facilities.

Labor Board Should Shun Political Tiffs—Weiler

VANCOUVER (CP) — It would be harmful for the British Columbia Labor Relations Boards to become heavily involved in political disputes such as the recent Oct. 14 general work stoppage, says LRB Chairman Paul Weiler.

In a defence of the board's decision last week that the Canadian Labor Congress' day of protest was not an illegal strike under the provincial labor code, Weiler said political work stoppages involve disputes between unions and a government.

"Neither the resources of the code nor this board have much, if anything, to contribute to the resolution of those problems," he said.

"If the law inserted the code and the board into the middle of that type of political dispute, the effect would likely simply be to damage the ability of these instruments to make a valuable contribution to labor-management relations in the long run."

Weiler's observations were contained in the board's formal, written reasons for its decision on the eve of last Thursday's protest that it was not an illegal walkout, that it was best left up to an arbitrator whether the stoppage violated collective agreements, and that picketing on the day was prohibited by the code.

The board's declaratory opinion was issued in response to an application by B.C. Hydro for a restraining order to prevent its 10,000 employees from walking off the job.

The board ruled the CLC's one-day general strike was a political protest and, therefore, not a contravention of the labor code.

The B.C. labor code defines strike as employee job action taken in concert in an effort to force an employer to agree to certain terms or conditions.

Weiler said the employees walked out to influence the federal government to change its anti-inflation program and ". . . no one was seeking to compel Hydro to do anything about its terms and conditions of employment."

"In other words, the work stoppages of Oct. 14 had a political rather than a collective bargaining purpose," he said.

He rejected suggestions that a broad strike definition as exists in Ontario would be a good thing. (The Ontario labor code defines any work-stoppage — whatever the reason — as a strike.)

Iran Defector Fears Torture, Seeks Legal Entry to Canada

VANCOUVER (CP) — A 24-year-old deserter from the Iranian Air Force has applied for refugee status in Canada.

Rasti Maymandi has been living here for the past three years as an illegal immigrant.

He says he fears he will be tortured or executed by Iranian police if he is deported to the Middle East nation.

In an interview, Maymandi said that despite the risk of deportation, he surfaced because he couldn't stand the pressure of his illegal status anymore.

"I had no legal rights," he said. "I couldn't get any decent jobs and I had to be constantly helped by friends."

A bachelor, Maymandi said he defected in late 1972 while he was in the United States for advanced training as an aerospace group equipment technician.

He said he had been under surveillance by Iranian military police while in the U.S. because he was raising questions about political conditions in Iran.

He says after living in the U.S. he came to realize that Iran was an unjust and restrictive society.

"Whenever the people raise their voices for their rights, the military has been called in," he said. "In 1963, demonstrations were crushed with 7,000 killed I didn't want to be used to fight my own people."

Maymandi said he was told during training that he could be executed if he was away from the service for only five days.

"You can be imprisoned for three-to-ten years for contact with Iranian student groups overseas, which I have done."

Maymandi said he joined the air force because it seemed the only practical way for a poor person to get an education. He said he signed up for seven years but was told later that he must remain in the service for 30 years.

His parents, sister and four brothers remain in Iran.

After deserting his unit, which was stationed in Texas, Maymandi headed for Canada with the intention of applying for landed immigrant status.

He said he called Canadian immigration officials in the U.S. twice before arriving in Canada and was told he could get refugee status.

"But when I got to Vancouver they told me 'no chance,' so I went underground."

Richard Braille, Maymandi's lawyer, said hs client surfaced last spring and attempted to return to the U.S. in order to apply from outside Canada for landed immigrant status, as required by law.

But he was picked up by U.S. border authorities and handed over to Canadian authorities.

Braille said Maymandi applied formally for refugee status in August and a decision is expected soon.

If the decision goes against him, he can appeal on humanitarian grounds.

Netted Body Boater's

Colwood RCMP said today they do not believe foul play was involved in the death of a man whose badly-decomposed, headless body was srecovered by a trawler off Moresby Island Monday.

However, a pathologist report suggests the man was between 25 to 40 years old, between five feet six inches and five feet eight inches tall, and weighed about 145 to 150 pounds.

Remnants of clothing indicate the man was wearing a pair od GWG pre-shrunk blue jeans, white undershorts with elastic band, maroon socks, and had on a brown belt with a brass bukle. The belt showed he had a waist size of 34 inches. There was no shirt and the shoes were missing.

Police said a rope was tied around the body's chest and presume the man was a boater who got in difficulty and put on a lifeline.

Police have begun checking missing person files dating back two years.

HOSPITAL APPROVED

VANCOUVER (CP) — Constructon of a 240-bed teaching and acute-care hospital on the University of B.C. campus will definitely go ahead, the provincial government announced Thursday.

Education Minister Pat McGeer and Health Minister Bob McClelland told a news conference that $50 million will be spent during the next three to four years in upgrading medical education in B.C. Of that, about two-thirds will go to the new hospital which will be the last link to complete a full health sciences centre on the campus.

Another $5 million will go to upgrading other medical teaching facilities at UBC, and the remaining $13 million will upgrade facilities at the existing downtown teaching hospitals — Vancouver General, St. Paul's and Shaughnessy.

Indian Fishing Rights Not Protected in B.C.

TEACHERS' PAY ROLLED BACK

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Teachers in the Kamloops school district will be expected to pay back 3.4 per cent of salaries paid to them so far this year under an Anti-Inflation Board rollback, district secretary-treasurer Al Macleod said Thursday.

Macleod said the teachers would have six months for reimbursing the board. He learned about the rollback in a telephone call to the federal Anti-Inflation Board Wednesday.

Man Mimicked Police, Charged

VANCOUVER (CP) — Norman Johnston, 22, of Vancouver was charged Thursday with impersonating a peace officer after a man apprehended a youth, handcuffed him, then took him home to his parents, then accused all three of criminal offences. The impersonator made frequent visits for 15 days before the parents called police.

VERNON (CP) — An Interior Indian band manager has reacted angrily to a Supreme Court of Canada decision which allows the B.C. government to expropriate aboriginal fishing rights.

The supreme court ruled Tuesday in favor of a B.C. appeal court decision which allowed the provincial government to expropriate these rights.

Reynolds Bonneau, Okanagan Band manager, described the supreme court ruling as ridiculous, and said he and other band members will continue to fish and hunt for food regardless of provincial law because aboriginal rights are sacred to Indians.

Politicians Emerge

LOGAN LAKE (CP) — Three people took out nomination papers Wednesday for seats on the village council, ending the possibility that there might not be a council due to lack of interest.

Until Wednesday, there was no interest in seeking public office in this southern interior mining village of 1,400.

Lie Test Queried

VANCOUVER (CP) — Submissions to a B.C. Supreme Court jury by Crown and defence counsel Thursday centre on lie detector tests taken by William Wong, who is charged with murder in the Jan. 23 knife slaying of Ken Chiu.

Defence lawyer Kenneth Westlake told the jury that the tests were favorable to Wong and that, since the test had a reliability of 90 per cent, the results would aid the jury in acquitting him.

Victim Named

FORT ST. JOHN (CP) — RCMP have identified a pedestrian killed Wednesday when struck by a car on the Alaska Highway as Harry Yahee, 50, of Fort St. John. An inquest has been ordered.

Tank Kills Man

WILLIAMS LAKE (CP) — William Hamilton, 35, of Kamloops, was killed Thursday when a tank on board the asphalt truck on which he was standing exploded. An inquest will be held.

Rail Inspected

FORT NELSON (CP) — Eight B.C. Railway directors began an inspection of the crown railway's northern extension here Thursday.

The group, led by vice-president M. C. Norris, were travelling down the line to Fort St. John, about 250 miles south of here, in two railway inspection vehicles.

Afton Backs Smelter

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Recent reports that copper smelting and refining are economically unfeasible in B.C. at present are "sort of true and sort of false" says Dr. Norman Keevil, president of Afton Mines Ltd.

The gloomy reports don't really apply to the kind of operation Afton is building here, he said Thursday.

Keevil was commenting on studies by five mining companies which have concluded that smelting and refining will be unprofitable in B.C. for at least five years.

Rising costs, depressed markets, labor unrest and government environment policies are casuing much of the problem, says a report by Andy McQuire, a marketing engineer with Placer Development Ltd.

McQuire says this is compounded by rising capital and operating costs for new installations and a world oversupply of smelting and refining capacity.

Keevil said five reports pertained mostly to very large operations and Afton's operation is about one quarter of the size of most, so it is in a much better position.

Keevil also said Afton wasn;t proposing just an independent smelter because the company has a mine with it. Afton's third advantage is that it doesn't use expensive conventional smelting processes.

Keevil said the world copper market is depressed but predicted an upswing soon.

Rail 'Fraud' Ignored—Barrett

NELSON (CP) — NDP leader Dave Barrett saiys he is concerned about the lack of newspaper coverage of a B.C. Supreme Court case involving B.C Rail and one of its contractors.

Barrett said Wednesday in a telephone interview that the case being heard in Vancouver between Mel Paving, of Red Deer, Alta., and BCR is one that should rate much attention.

"This is a case involving conspiracy and fraud being brought against B.C. Rail and tens of millions of dollars," said Barrett.

"I am raising a single question — why, since only minor coverage of the opening day of the trial, has nothing been printed!"

Mel's suit against BCR involves work done on the Dease Lake extension of the railway in northwest B.C. The extension was started by the former Social Credit government under W. A. C. Bennett.

Mel successfully bid $5.2 million to perform clearing, grading and installation of culverts over about 49 miles of the as-yet-uncompleted extension.

Mel told the court Oct. 4, when the trial began that it actually did $11.4 million worth of work and is asking that the contract be declared invalid and that unspecified damages be awarded.

The company said BCR either deliberately or unknowingly misrepresented the amount of work that had to be done.

BCR has filed a counter suit in the amount of $9.5 million, which it claims is needed to complete work Mel left undone.

Radiation Danger Hit

OTTAWA ([illegible]) — Two Northern Ontario New Democratic Party MPs urged the government Thursday to force the Atomic Energy Control Board to publicize everything it knows about health hazards posed by radiation in Elliot Lake.

An unpublished preliminary report by the AECL shows that a natural leakage of radiation from a 3,000-foot seam of radio-active ore in the centre of the Northern Ontario community appears to be producing unacceptable concentrations of radon gas and residues in some homes.

John Rodriguez (Nickel Belt) told the Commons the residents of Elliot Lake have a right to know what the AECL is doing, what they have discovered and what action they intend to take. Instead he government authority was "being determined to maintain tight-lipped secrecy" about health hazards.

Rodriguez moved that the government instruct the AECL to make its findings public and to call a public inquiry dealing with radiation in the town and surrounding area.

Cyril Symes (NDP—Sault Ste. Marie) also stressed the importance of letting Elliot Lake residents know how serious the radiation is.

Also, the government should consider amending its standards of acceptable radiation levels for this community, he said.

GRAVE SITUATION, BALDWIN CLAIMS

OTTAWA (CP) — To hear veteran Conservative Gerald Baldwin tell it, problems involving bureaucrats who give out unauthorized information have reached grave proportions.

The 69-year-old MP from Peace River rose in the Commons Thursday to take the government up on a challenge that MPs make known any incidents involving misuse of official information.

"After I received my first pension cheque I got a letter from a firm of funeral directors offering me their services," Baldwin said, straightfaced.

Did Health Minister Marc Lalonde know if his department — it sends out pension cheques— was giving out information regarding old people?.

Inco Sues USW Over Protest Day

THOMPSON, Man. (CP) — Inco Ltd. has launched action against the United Steelworkers of America to recover losses from the Oct. 14 day of protest.

The company also has issued written reprimands, a form of disciplinary procedure, against 13 employees for participating in picket-line activities.

An Inco spokesman said a grievance has been filed against the 2,800-member Steelworkers Local 6166 under the standard grievance procedure, alleging violation of the no-strike provision of the company-union contract.

The grievance does not state the amount the company seeks to recover. Production was halted at mine and smelter operations in this city when picket lines were set up.

The company spokesman said no employees were suspended and no action was taken against any for not reporting for work.

The written reprimands against the pickets constitute a stage of disciplinary procedure beyond which further discipline could result in dismissal.

Steelworkers president Dick Martin said the disciplined employees are union executive board members.

"I can understand filing a grievance against the union although I think it is unjustified," he said.

Meanwhile, in Saskatoon, a management spokesman for the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool today rejected union criticism of disciplinary action taken against employees who participated in the day of protest.

Metro Kereluke, Pool personnel director, said the grain services union statement that the Pool was tramping on the employees' political rights was "irrelevant."

Management was not opposed to political expression by its employees, provided it was on the employes' own time, he said.

Northerners Rake CBC All Around

RANKIN INLET (CP) — The territorial council Thursday criticized the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. for everything from biased news coverage to insufficient country and western music.

Doug Ward, recently appointed CB northern service director, told council of the progress made by the corporation in providing radio and television coverage over the last four years.

However, he admitted there was ample room for improvement and that, for example, northern television programming was non-existent.

"We are criticized by native groups for reporting on the differences that they have with each other or differences within organizations," said Ward.

"We are criticized by people in favor of development when we report on the negative aspects that some kinds of development might bring."

Don Stewart, councillor for Hay River, complained of biased coverage by the CBC of the Berger inquiry into the impacts of a Mackenzie valley pipeline and other news stories.

Stewart also attacked several television programs, especially weather reports beamed from Vancouver, which he said didn't do anything for the constitution of Hay River residents suffering in —40 weather.

O CANADA BILL READ

OTTAWA (CP) — A government bill declaring O Canada to be the national anthem of Canada was given routine first reading in the Commons on Thursday.

The bill was one of several placed before the first session of this Parliament which ended before the bill was dealt with.

Flu Shots Doubtful

REGINA (CP) — It is doubtful if a swine flu immunization program will be conducted in Saskatchewan this winter, provincial epidemiologist Dr. George Davidson told the Saskatchewan Medical Association meeting Wednesday in Regina.

He said Saskatchewan has ordered about 400,000 dosages of the swine flu vaccine but it has not decided what to do with it.

There is a good chance Saskatchewan will follow other Canadian provinces which have decided not to implement swine flu immunization programs this year because there is no evidence an epidemic will occur, Dr. Davidson said.

Go Back: Macdonald

OTTAWA (CP) — Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said Thursday the most sensible thing for the striking workers at the Anvil mines in the Yukon to do is to go back to work.

Because the workers were on strike against the anti-inflation board created by an act of Parliament, there was nothing the government could do to settle the dispute.

The Yukon workers went on strike June 30 after the administrator of the anti-inflation board rolled back a negotiated 14 per cent wage increase to eight per cent.

See How They Run . . .

Times News Services

OTTAWA — The jaunty Tories are having a fine old time these days over the misfortunes of the Trudeau government.

The number of federal Liberals leaving to run in Quebec for Premier Robert Bourassa set them off again Thursday in a laughter-filled Commons exchange.

Gordon Fairweather (PC — Fundy Royal) got the ball rolling in question period when he rose to quiz Marcel Lessard, minister of regional economic expansion.

"I want to get my question in before he also leaves to run in Quebec," he said as his colleagues howled with glee.

Lessard rose to say he was happy in Ottawa, but it was too late to halt the Tory wits.

"Will the last one out turn out the lights," someone yelled.

One Liberal tried repartee by shouting "what about MacLean?", in reference to Conservative J. A. MacLean who resigned his federal seat earlier this week to head the Tory party in Prince Edward Island.

"There's one difference between MacLean and (Jean) Marchand," Fairweathr replied, "our man is leaving a rising ship while Marchand is leaving a sinking ship."

Marchand, a former key man in the Trudeau cabinet, announced Wednesday he was quitting federal politics to run for the Bourassa Liberals in the Nov. 15 provincial election.

Bilingualism 'Part of Canada'

OTTAWA (FP) — Former Defence Minister James Richardson was criticized in the Commons Thursday by a cabinet minister for his stand agains entrenching additional language rights in the constitution.

Secretary of State John Roberts said he regrets Richardson's opposition to the government's desire to make linguistic equality part of the "essential fabric" of Canada.

The former minister from Manitoba is wrong to argue that the government's bilingualism policy has created tensions in the country, he said; stating also that Richardson should regard language rights as essential as freedom of speech and freedom of association.

During his speech, Roberts underlined statements in last week's Throne Speech and announcements by other ministers that the bilingualism policy will be modified to remove measures which serve only to irritate some Canadians.

He forecast an easing of labelling requirements in both French and English and revisions to the policy of identifying civil service positions as bilingual.

He even suggested that the government will phase out the term "bilingualism" itself.

Richardson, MP for Winnipeg South, has stated that he will go around the country to speak in opposition to the government's intention of entrenching additional language rights in the constitution once it is brought to Canada from Britain while giving Quebec a veto over future amendments to the document.

Roberts told the Commons that he, too, intends to travel about Canada to clear up "misunderstandings" about the government's position. Apparently he will be the cabinet's representative in the public debate over the issue against Richardson.

The secretary of state argued that the official languages policy doesn't impose obligations on Canadians to speak French but protects and guarantees language rights in the country.

"It is because I believe so strongly in this principle that I regret the position taken by the former minister of defence," he said.

Roberts stated that his former cabinet colleague believes it isn't time yet to consider principles of linguistic equality "as part and parcel of the essential fabric of our country."

10% FEWER JOBS OPEN

OTTAWA (CP) — The average number of job vacancies in the third quarter of 1976 was 63,800, up from 54,600 in the second three-month period of the year, Statistics Canada reported Thursday.

The job-vacancy total, however, was 10 per cent lower than the third quarter of 1975.

Highest vacancy rates were in the low-unemployment Prairie provinces, with 18 available jobs for every 1,000 existing positions in Alberta, 12 vacant jobs for ever 1,000 in Saskatchewan and 10 per 1,000 in Manitoba.

In Nova Scotia, there were only four available jobs for every 1,000 existing positions. There were five jobs open for every 1,000 in Newfoundland, Quebec and B.C. and six vacancies for every 1,000 jobs in New Brunswick.

Gillespie Maps Policy

TORONTO (CP) — Businesses that make a significant investment in energy conservation equipment may get the benefits of any savings immediately, Energy Minister Alastair Gillespie said Thursday.

The minister, bringing his conservation message before a meeting of manufacturing executives, said he is sympathetic to industry concerns that the anti-inflation program does not provide separate credits for conservation expenditures.

Copies of the minister's speech were printed on the backs of energy department maps, chopped up into letter-size to meet the bureaucracy's need for paper.

A spokesman said that Gillespie intends to write all his letters on the backs of old maps until the department's storerooms are emptied of the outdated material.

Last spring industry told government that any benefits from energy saving equipment should go to the companies.

"I have been assured that the board is prepared to give special consideration in cases where firms undertake significant investments to improve energy use and productivity in general," the minister said.

On investments that improve productivity, the board has said companies can deduct 50 per cent of the investment from any excess revenues in calculating allowable profits.

It means companies can run up bigger profits than they could previously.

CIDA Issue Ducked

OTTAWA (CP) — Two cabinet ministers ducked questions Thursday on whether consideration is being given to changing the minister who is responsible for the $1-billion-a-year Canadian International Development Agency.

Acting prime minister Allan MacEachen and External Affairs Minister Don Jamieson told Opposition leader Joe Clark that Jamieson still reports for the agency.

The minister said a change is not being considered by the government as a whole but he added it is up to Prime Minister Trudeau to disclose what he has in mind.

Earlier this week sources close to the situation said a debate has developed in government over who should speak for CIDA, which has been under the umbrella of External Affairs since it was created in the 1960s.

The sources said that MacEachen was promised he could continue his co-chairmanship of the North-South Economic Conference in Paris and continue as head of CIDA if he would accept Trudeau's request in the recent cabinet shuffle that he move from external back to government leader in the Commons.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

A 23-year-old Victoria man was cleared Thursday in Victoria provincial court on one count in a major narcotics charge and ordered by Judge William Ostler to stand higher-court trial on a second count after waiving a preliminary hearing.

Richard William Barker, 502 Craigflower, had been charged with trafficking in marijuana Sept. 2 in Victoria and possession of marijuana about the same time for the purpose of trafficking.

Defence lawyer Ted Hanman told the judge that Barker wished to waive a preliminary hearing on the trafficking count and prosecutor Nicholas Lott then entered a stay on the purpose count.

No order prohibiting publication od broadcast was requested because of the waiver but such an order was issued Sept. 2 by Judge Blake Allan when some of the facts were mentioned during the bail hearing. Barker is free on an undertaking to return for his higher-court trial.

A drug charge which was believed to be the first of its kind in Victoria court was read against Cameron Maxwell Brown, 19, of 1800 Lafontaine.

He was charged with possession of the controlled drug Tuinol Oct. 13 in Victoria for the purpose of trafficking. Brown, who had been given a notice to appear in court, said he wanted to talk to a lawyer and was remanded by Ostler to next Thursday for further hearing.

Leonard Robert Larson, 38, was charged with two counts of using a credit card he knew was obtained "by the commission in Canada of an offence," one of possession of a credit card he knew was similarly obtained and one of uttering a cheque.

Prosecutor Robert Mulligan said all four counts, dated Oct. 12 to 14 in Saanich, would proceed indictably. This was taken to mean Larson faced a maximum of 10 years in prison under the credit-card counts through a law passed by Parliament early this year.

Larson, already facing a charge of being unlawfully at large in Saanich Oct. 22, 1975, was remanded to Wednesday by Ostler for further hearing after a request by defence lawyer William McElmoyle.

In traffic court, Paul Norman Pellow, 21, of 1009 McKenzie, pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of driving Oct. 9 with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent and was sentenced by Judge Allan to 21 days in jail.

Largest fine Thursday in traffic court was a $600 penalty for James Henry Utterson, 26, of 625 Constance, who pleaded guilty to a Saanich charge of impaired driving Aug. 13.

Four persons pleaded guilty to separate charges of driving with a blood-alcohol reading above .08 per cent. They were Frederick Gordon Hughes, 49, of 65 St. Giles, stopped Oct. 7 in Sidney and fined $450; John Robert McGinnes, 40, of 642 Agnes, Oct. 11 in Saanich and $450; Walter Philip Quaite, 18, of 19 Midwood, Oct. 9 in Saanich and $400, and Patrick Michael Joseph Murray, 20, of 1010 Queens, April 10 in Victoria and $500.

Murray Arthur Muralt, 28, of 1016 Brock, pleaded guilty to a Colwood charge of impaired driving Oct. 1 and was fined $400.

Kitimat Fluoride 'Damage' Disputed

PRINCE RUPERT (CP) — Conclusions of a report prepared for the Canadian Association of Smelter and Allied Workers on fluoride pollution at Kitimat were disputed Thursday by an Aluminum Company of Canada researcher.

Dr. Hubert Bunce, a forestry consultant, said in a telephone interview from Vancouver that the CASAW study was misleading and infers conclusions not backed up by facts.

Dr. Bunce said the report for the union by Dr. Clancy Gordon was written to imply that fluorides are responsible for a 20-quare-mile death zone for trees around the Alcan smtlter at Kitimat, but Dr. Gordon never says in the report that this is the case.

Dr. Gordon, professor of botany at the University of Montana, prepared the report on fluoride concentrations in vegetation samples. The union-commissioned report is the first step in an occupational health study being developed by CASAW.

In the report, Dr. Gordon says: "The only way to stop this (the destruction of trees near the smelter) is for the aluminum plant to immediately start reducing its emissions to one pound of fluoride per ton of aluminum produced."

Alcan produces 280,000 tons of aluminum a year at Kitimat and Dr. Gordon says the current level of fluoride emission is about five to seven pounds a ton of aluminum.

Dr. Bunce said facts in the three-week union study correspond with the 3½-year Alcan study by his company.

The company-commissioned study says that timber growth on about 4,600 acres of land around the smelter has been reduced up to 30 per cent and a high foliage fluoride content has been recorded.

The company report says that during a 22-year period of smelter operation, about 20,000 cunits of wood (a cunit is 100 cubic feet of wood) has been lost due to fluoride emissions, while insect infestation in the early 1960s destroyed 800,000 cunits.

Alcan commissioned its study in 1973 following a pollution control branch public inquiry that recommended more study on the effects of fluoride emissions.

Dr. Gordon says in his report that the Canadian Forest Service and Alcan tried to be misleading by saying the trees were damaged primarily by insects.

Dr. Gordon says the band of dead trees corresponds to the area where any fluoride tmissions from the smelter would be carried by the pevailing southerly winds.

He says fluoride concentrations were not distributed evenly. The crowns of some trees were dead while the lower areas might remain temporarily healthy. This could account for conflicting concentration results obtained by researchers for the company and for local landowners.

Dr. Bunce said fluoride content is very high in foliage around the smelter but vegetables and gardens in Kitimat were in no danger because the wind blows in the opposite direction.

In an Oct. 14 letter to employees, Alcan says there have been no diagnosed cases of fluorosis, a respiratory ailment sometimes found among aluminum smelter employees.

The letter says the company was continuing urine sample monitoring of fluoride levels and had no cause for concern.

A company bid for participation in the union study was rejected by CASAW.

Decision Held On Habeas Corpus

An application to free a man being held pending trial for attempted murder was launched in B.C. Supreme Court Thursday before Mr. Justice Davie Fulton in Victoria.

The habeas corpus application was made in supreme court chambers by Cecil Branson on behalf of James R. Balez, of Duncan, who is charged with attempted murder of another Duncan man, Jim Bowman last June 9 at Duncan.

The justice reserved decision.

Branson argued Balez was being held illegally, in his interpretation of the Criminal Code and the Bill of Rights, and had had no opportunity to put his side of the event before a judge of the county court before being committed.

The accused had been at liberty prior to September, when he agreed to an adjournment of his case for trial Nov. 29. He was subsequently arrested on a warant of committal.

Bernard R. B. Morahan, of the prosecutor's office in Duncan, appeared for the Crown, and argued there is a distinction according to the amended Criminal Code between an arrest accompanied by mandatory remands of no more than eight days, and an arrest by warrent for committal. Branson said the complainant alleges he was shot in the jaw after being pistol-whipped.

Canada Joins UN Council

UNITED NATIONS (CP) — Canada was elected to the UN Security Council Thursday along with four other new members in the general reshuffling of non-permanent Council seats that takes place every two years.

Selected by the General Assembly along with Canada were West Germany, India, Venezuela and Mauritius.

The five new members take their seats Jan. 1 and will serve until the end of 1978.

With the election, Canada became the first Western country to get the nod for a fourth term on the 15-country council. Canada previously served on the Council in 1948-49, in 1958-59 and 1967-68.

Canada's Council representative for this fourth term will be William Barton, 57, a highly-respected career diplomat with wide experience in UN affairs. His appointment in August as Canadian ambassador to the UN, succeeding Saul Rae, followed four years as ambassador to the UN in Geneva, which serves as headquarters for most of the UN specialized agencies.

Barton also was Canada's representative on the disarmament conference which meets regularly in Geneva.

VOTING CUTS LIQUOR SALES

The Liquor Administration Board said Thursday that liquor stores will be closed on civic election day Nov. 17.

Licensed premises will be closed during the polling time — 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. — but can re-open after the polls clsoe.

Trudeau Explains Separatism Views

TOKYO (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau expressed his views on Quebec separatism Thursday to students of Japan's oldest university where he received an honorary doctorate degree.

Trudeau told a class of about 30 students studying Canadian history at Keio University that separatism in Quebec started because of some people's belief that they had been treated unfairly.

Trudeau said that 10 months ago he did not perceive any real problem in the matter, but that "because of misunderstanding in the last six to eight months the separatist fact has been heightened."

The Canadian prime minister did not go into details of the Quebec separatism problem, but said that "if the people have a feeling of inferiority in terms of the majority they're surrounded by, the job of the national government is to reassure these people they are not endangered."

"If the national government and the English-speaking majority in Canada become more aggressive, separatism in Quebec will become a real danger," he said. "That danger recedes if the rest of the country becomes more tolerant and understanding."

He assured his listeners, however, that the divisive forces of nationalism will not grow stronger and threaten Canadian unity.

Trudeau walked into Associate Prof. Henry Nelles's class shortly after he had received the honorary doctor of law degree from the university's president, Hiroshi Kuno.

Nelles, of York University in Toronto, currently is giving two courses on Canadian history, one at the undergraduate level and the other for graduates.

Trudeau, who arrived in Tokyo with his wife Margaret on Wednesday for a six-day official visit that began Thursday, was not accompanied by Margaret when he went to the 118-year-old university of Western studies. Keio has an enrolment of 23,813.

The prime minister later had a luncheon meeting with leaders of the Japanese business world.

In his remarks to the executives of the Keidanren (Federation of Japanese Economic Organizations), Trudeau solicited Japanese investment capital in Canada which he said "offers advantages of political and economic stability that few other resource-rich countries can equal."

He assured the businessmen there was no need for concern about Canada's policies regarding the export of resources and the import of investment capital.

"Our policy on resource exports is to share what we have with others while ensuring against wasteful exploitation and in favor of Canada's own foreseeable needs."

He mentioned the framework of economic co-operation which he and Japanese Premier Takio Miki had signed Thursday, setting out guidelines for further broadening and deepening of Canada's economic relations with Japan.

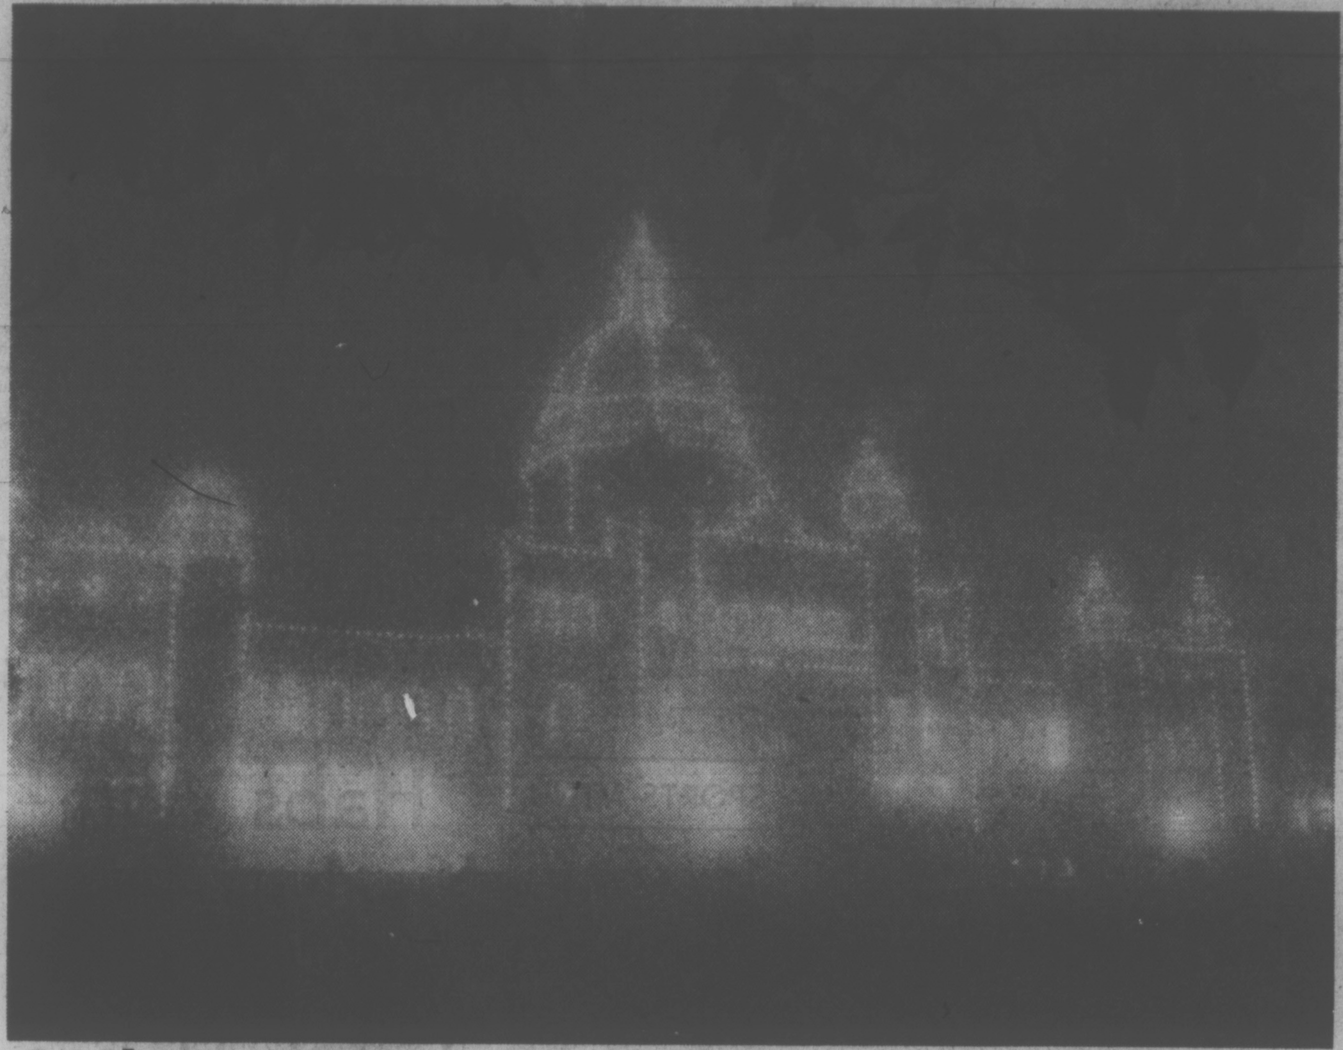
Hudson's Bay Company



LEGISLATIVE LIGHTS were dim as heavy fog descended on the city Thursday night, creating this ghostly effect. One evening flight out of Victoria International Airport was cancelled to Vancouver and flights today were delayed up to 90 minutes. Ferries were running on schedule at Swartz Bay. More overnight fog has been forecast for tonight. (John McKay photo)

Fog Blanket To Vanish By Sunday

Heavy fog which has caused transportation problems for the last two days should lift by Sunday.

Weather officials said today they expected a new air pressure system to move in from the Pacific Sunday, allowing the "stagnant air mass" to drift off.

Until then, air travellers between Victoria and Vancouver will continue to experience delays and cancellations.

One Air Canada flight from Victoria was cancelled Thursday night as was a flight coming in the other direction. Some Pacific Western Airlines flights from Victoria were delayed as they had to land at Abbotsford.

Airline spokesmen said there were no concellations today but some delays of up to 90 minutes.

An official at Victoria International Airport said planes were not having trouble getting in and out of Victoria. The problem was there was nowhere to go as Vancouver airport was closed for a time.

A spokesman for B.C. Ferries said the fog is not affecting ferry schedules and police said there were no problems on the highways in the Victoria area.

A weather official said there would be no appreciable change in the foggy conditions today or Saturday.

He said the condition is known as an inversion and is caused by warm air above trapping cooler air. Until the pressure system changes and an air current blows the warm air away, the condition will remain.

CRASH IGNITES DISASTER CHAIN

Saanich firemen said the car slammed into a telephone pole. The impact jarred loose a guy wire which struck a high tension power line which tangled with a power line into a house at 1871 Grandview.

A fire official said the occupants of the house, Mr. and Mrs. Demson Stewart, smelled smoke and reported the fire at 12:23 a.m.

Firemen said structural damage was minimal but estimated it would cost several hundred dollars to repair the electrical circuitry in the switch box.

The car left the scene immediately after the accident and has not been located.

TOWN TALK

Is it Orwellian Newspeak or just a nice little touch of humor?

The program covering the Victoria Status of Women Action Group conference at the University of Victoria today and Saturday lists what SWAG is all about and names its standing committees.

There's family law, education, herstory . . .

Herstory?

Ah yes, used to be that old chauvinist term history.

A veteran Victoria newspaperman who has spent most of his career writing about television, is going to work directly within the medium.

Where else, for instance could you get a bacon-and-eggs breakfast for 32 cents? Or a prime roast dinner for 89 cents?

Nowhere. At least not in this century. And that's the point.

For one glorious day the Empress is returning to its 19th-century price list. It's all part of the Canadian Pacific hotel chain's celebrations this week of its 90th anniversary.

But, says Empress spokesman Dorothy Cook, the 1886 prices are effective for only the one day, and don't apply to liquor, coffee or anything else that isn't on the special menu.

"Anybody who did this for a week would be broke," she said.

Broke, yes, but imagine the number of satisfied customers.

Students from St. Michaels University School and Lester B. Pearson College of the Pacific are going to match wits and oratory skills tonight at a debate in the library of St. Michaels on Richmond Road.

The topic sounds bland enough: "This house is of the opinion that democratic education has produced a generation of illiterates."

The catch is the debate will be carried out in English, Spanish and Chinese.

Dermod Travis, one of the debaters, says its the first multilingual debate in Canada.

Mayor Brian Smith of Oak Bay praised the man who taught him to tie a trout fly on the Campbell River as a boy.

He was referring at the close of council meeting to the late Roderick Haig-Brown in a brief tribute to two men who had served Canada with distinction, and who died within hours of each other Oct. 9. The other was former judge Tom Norris, whom Smith said was a "profile of courage" in standing up single-handedly to union dictator Hal Banks.

There were few men of Haig-brown's stature, the conservationist who spoke out against damming rivers so many years before it was fashionable. He had "so many more books to write . . ."

Cliff Survey Urged For Dallas Erosion

The first step toward halting the erosion of the Dallas Road cliffs, which is eating away about 14 inches of shoreline a year, was taken Thursday by Victoria's public works committee.

Aldermen recommended that a shoreline geological survey be conducted by Thurber Consultants Ltd., to assess the problem and the required solutions.

The study will cost a maximum of $10,000, and city engineer John Sansom hazarded a "rough guess" that the actual work needed to halt the erosion process could cost between $50,000 and $100,000.

The survey was not recommended without some quibbles from committee members.

Ald. Ron McKenzie disliked the proposal to commission the study without first inviting tenders from interested bidders, but was told by Sansom that Thurber Consultants is the only firm of geotechnical engineers in this area.

Ald. Bill Tindall complained that authorizing the survey without knowing the eventual cost of the shoreline stabilization work was a case of "buying a pig in a poke."

Sansom replied that there wouldn't be any need for a study if such facts were already available.

He said the main area of concern over erosion — which is caused by a combination of heavy wave action undermining the cliffs and inadequate drainage — is the stetch between Clover Point and Douglas Street.

BLOOD DRIVE FALLS BEHIND

There were 376 donors at the blood clinic in the Hillside Mall Thursday but the Red Cross campaign in Greater Victoria continues to slip behind its objective.

Spokesman Gerry Savage said Thursday's target had been 433 but he described results as "quite good."

After four days in the two-week blood drive to attract 2,500 donors, the number of donors stands at 911 while the objective to date is 1,068.

Today's clinic was at Work Point Barracks. Monday the clinic is in the Georgian lounge of The Empress from 2:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

Jetfoil To End Nov. 1

Georgian Gulf Cruises has announced jetfoil service between Victoria and Seattle will end Nov. 1, following a 46-day trial period.

Company President James Byrn said Thursday that after that date the jetfoil is going to Europe on a promotion trip.

He said response to the service, which began Sept. 15, has been excellent with the vessel operating at about 90 per cent capacity.

Byrn said he will review the results of the trial run and then make a decision on whether to purchase a similar jetfoil for $7.5 million and operate on the Seattle-Victoria run next summer.

Vancouver-based Georgian Gulf Cruises has been running the jetfoil in co-operation with Boeing Co. of Seattle and the B.C. Steamship Co.

Glazier Seeks Second Term On City Council

Ald. Murray Glazier said today he will seek a second term on Victoria city council in the Nov. 20 civic electon.

He is the second incumbent to announce his re-election ambitions. Also running again is Ald. Bob Ellis, but five-year council veteran Ald. Alf Hood said last week he will not be in the contest.

The fourth incumbent, Ald. John Hayes, has yet to indicate his intentions.

Glazier is chairman of the housing and neighborhood improvement committee on council and one of his major tasks has been the implementation of N.I.P. projects in James Bay and Victoria West.

He is also a director on the Capital Regional Board, where he is chairman of the land banking and housing committee and a member of public works. He plans to run again for a board seat.

Bill McElroy, 30, a research officer for the provincial department of housing, also announced today he will be a candidate in the November election.

A director of the Fairfield Community Association, McElroy was runner-up in the February byelection for the seat of MLA Sam Bawlf.

McElroy made a bid for the mayor's seat in 1975, placing third.

New Prosecutor In Forces Case

A new prosecuting officer was named Thursday to replace Capt. James J. Priddle who collapsed during the court martial of M-Cpl. Adolph Plewa, 46, Tuesday.

A Canadian forces spokesman said Priddle was under treatment for exhaustion.

Maj. William Reed, who was prosecutor in the court martial of Cpl. Robert Ganner, will take Priddle's place when the trial resumes at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday in the chief petty officer's mess.

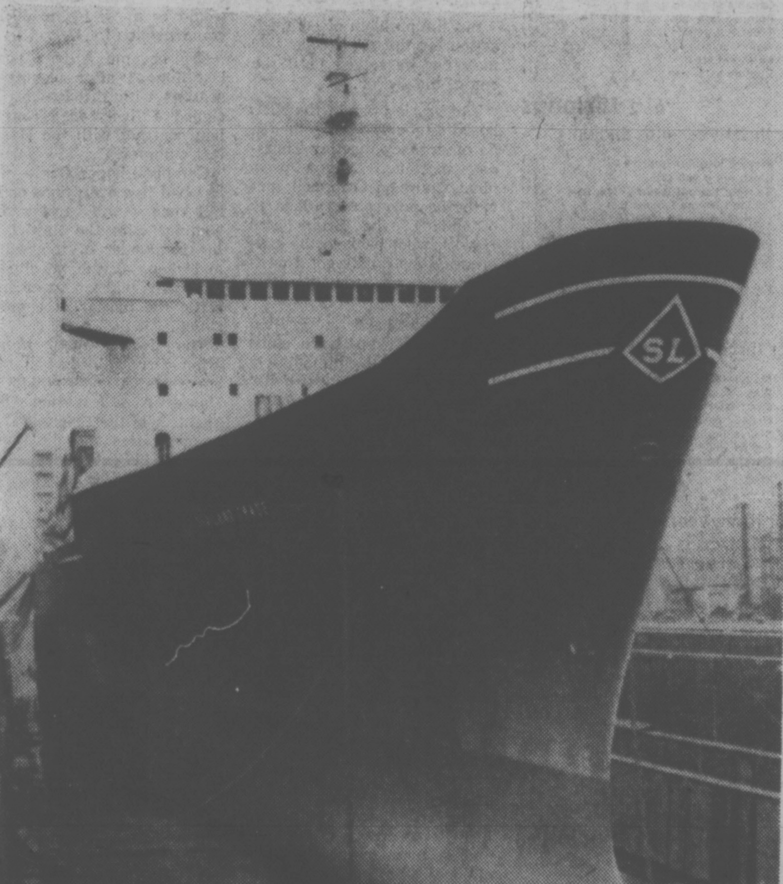
Prosecutor in the fourth court martial, in which pleas have not yet been taken, is Cmdr. Doug Sherlock, deputy judge advocate for Pacific command. The accused in this case is a former serviceman, ex-M-Cpl. Craig Campbell, 30, who remains subject to service discipline for alleged offences while he was a serving member of the forces.

Campbell was adjourned to 8:30 a.m. Wednesday to plead to three charges — theft, receiving monies improperly and conspiracy to steal.

Plewa has pleaded not guilty to three similar charges. Both men were former mess managers at Club 44.

Ganner, former mess president, was found guilty of a series of charges, discharged and sentenced to four years in jail.

The second man tried, Cpl. Michael J. Dalrymple, was found guilty of a lesser number of offences while he was vice-president of the mess and was sentenced to a year in jail and discharged.



UNIQUE UNDERPINNINGS of the American container ship Sea-Land Trade were hidden again this morning when she was refloated in the Esquimalt Graving Dock after an eight-day refit. Stolen Bell: The Silence Is Deafening

The silence is beginning to deafen the Royal Roads command.

Earlier this week, someone stole a ship's bell from the Military College. Since then, the bell hasn't tolled and the college doesn't know what toll has to be paid to get the bell back.

The crime was purportedly perpetrated to hold college cadets responsible for raising more money for the United Way campaign by having them march in Saturday's walkathon.

But an appeal went out from the college vice-command to suggest a different ransom be paid because it is mid-term break at the college and few of the students will be around.

The college is taking everything in good faith, but would appreciate a call at 388-1495. (Ask for Capt. John MacDonald, base information officer.)

MacDonald said he would hold the call in strictest confidence, but would require that the caller identify himself. He also would have to see the bell before the ransom was negotiated.

New School Board Head?

At least two new faces on the Greater Victoria school board are guaranteed following the Nov. 20 elections, and there could be a third.

Later in the week Roy Temple also announced he will not run.

And insiders speculate board chairman Bill Ross will also step down. He has been swamped with work since he took over as headmaster of Brentwood College in Mill Bay earlier this year.

From the very beginning he has said he would have to carefully consider whether to run again or not.

Only board vice-chairman Susan Brice ("Yes, I'm running") and trustee Dr. Mark Fisher ("I'm sufficiently insane to run again") definitely will be on the ballot out of the five incumbents whose terms expire at the end of this year.

Three Victoria businessmen have announced they are willing to take up the slack. Bud Smith, Peter Yorke and John Young have all announced their candidacy for school trustee.

In announcng her decision not to run, Mrs. Baird apologized to the board for leaving so soon. She had been on the board for only one term.

But she said that being a trustee and raising five children between the ages of 10 and 14 "is just not compatible."

Temple was a little less enamored with being a trustee.

"I haven't been able to make the contribution I thought I could," the retired school principal said. "Therefore, there hasn't been the satisfaction I expected."

He said he considered the board meetings boring and largely a waste of time, dragging on and on, accomplishing little.

The committee work was interesting and productive, he said, but not the board work.

He was opposed to the closing of Lampson School and after he raised his objection, was removed from the one committee he enjoyed — Camosun College council. He said Ross accused him of "fiscal irresponsibility," in removing him.

Reds Show Class In Routing Yanks

NEW YORK (CP-AP) — Manager Billy Martin's dream of a return to Broadway baseball glory ended an inning early Thursday, shattered by the thundering bat of Cincinnati's Johnny Bench.

The Yankees drew their last gasps with Martin in the clubhouse, banished during a four-run Cincinnati ninth that completed a 7-2 victory over the Yankees and a World Series sweep for the Reds.

Bench clubbed two homers, the first a two-run drive in the third that broke a 1-1 tie and the second a three-run homer in the ninth. He was named most valuable player in the Series.

Martin, who hasn't been with a winner since the Yankees sent him away in 1956, said he was tossed out of Thursday's game for throwing a ball toward plate umpire Bill Deegan "after he threw three balls at me."

Martin hid in the off-limits trainer's room for half an hour after the Reds completed their four-game Series sweep, then finally emerged. He had been crying.

"Yah, I'm not ashamed of it," Martin said of his ejection.

"Deegan threw three balls at me while he was changing baseballs," said the fiery manager, now talking in soft, calm tones. "One hit me in the chest and another almost hit me in the mouth.

"I threw the ball toward him in disgust because I thought he called a brutal game and I got tired of him throwing balls at me."

Cincinnati manager Sparky Anderson said he stopped worrying about his team's fate after the Reds won their National League playoff opener against Philadelphia Phillies.

"I said to myself then that if we beat (pitcher) Steve Carlton in the first game, we'd win seven straight," Anderson recalled.

That's exactly what the Reds did, eliminating the Phillies in the minimum three games and then sweeping the Yankees.

It was the first World Series sweep since Baltimore Orioles triumph over Los Angeles Dodgers in 1966. And it was the first time a National League club had taken two successive World Series since New York Giants did it in 1921-22.

It was, to put it mildly, awesome.

"They beat us tonight," muttered catcher Thurman Munson, the only bright spot in the otherwise pale New York lineup. "They beat us this time, they beat us four straight, they beat the hell out of us all the way through. What else is there to say?"

Whatever else there was to say was said succinctly by Anderson.

"This ball club has more class than any other club of the 24 all around the country," Anderson said. "Last year, when we beat Boston Red Sox in seven games, they were like kids. Now they're men."

Indeed. In the Cincinnati locker room, the mood was remarkably subdued, as though these Reds were used to such championships—which, in fact, they are.

There was little of the vahooing, champagne-bathing, towel-throwing of last year, when it took the Reds seven dramatic games to subdue the Red Sox.

"Last year was certainly exciting, more so than this one," said Bench.

"And last year might have been more gratifying for me, personally," added Bench, whose .533 Series average more than offset his dismal, injury decimated season when he batted .234 with 16 homers and 74 RBI.

It may well have been Munson's finest game ever, too. He had four hits, scored one run and drove in the other. His six consecutive hits over two games tied a Series record set in 1924 by Washington's Goose Goslin.

Munson batted .529 in the Series, far above any other Yankee starter. New York as a whole hit a paltry .222 to the Reds' .313.

In the first inning, Munson singled and scored on Chris Chambliss' double. In the fifth, Mickey Rivers singled, stole second and scored on Munson's single.

But each time the Yanks got a run, the Reds got more back.

In the fourth inning, Joe Morgan walked and stole second with such ease that Munson didn't even bother throwing. With two outs, George Foster singled him home.

In the ninth, with the Yanks down by just one run, the Reds demolished any hopes they had of making a comeback.

And half an hour after that, Yankee Stadium stood like an enormous tomb in the ravaged South Bronx. Silent, littered, ravaged itself with huge chunks of sod torn away. And most of all, empty.

Baird 10th Player Cut By Guidolin

Times News Services

Winger Ken Baird, who scored 74 goals and 86 assists in four World Hockey Association seasons, is the latest casualty of Edmonton Oilers' house cleaning.

Baird, who had been forbidden to practice with Oilers since Monday, is the 10 player from last year's team to be released since Bep Guidolin replaced Bill Hunter as Edmonton's general manager.

Guidolin denied Baird was part of a house cleaning move. Instead, said Guidolin, Oilers had five left wingers and that number "didn't figure in my plans."

In action on the ice, Quebec Nordiques edged Calgary cowboys 4-2, Birmingham Bulls defeated Houston Aeros 8-5 and San Diego Mariners and Indianapolis Racers fought to a 4-4 tie.

Habs Win; Bridgman Leads Flyers

By The Canadian Press

It took a little rough play and a late goal by Guy Lafleur to wake up Montreal Canadiens in a National Hockey League game Thursday night.

"In the third period we had to do something," said Steve Shutt after the Canadiens took a 5-3 win over Toronto Maple Leafs, although Montreal trailed 3-2 with less than three minutes remaining.

"We had to go out and hit guys and forecheck. We couldn't just sit back, because we're an offensive team and can't play a rinky-dink game. We started hitting and that woke everybody up."

In other games, Philadelphia Flyers whipped Chicago Black Hawks 5-1, Cleveland Barons beat St. Louis Blues 6-2 and Washington Capitals tied Los Angeles Kings 5-5.

The Canadiens, with a 7-2 record, led 2-0 after the first period but the Leafs tied the score 2-2 in the second. Dave Williams put the Leafs ahead 3-2 at 6:43 of the final period with his first goal of the season before the Canadiens rallied.

Guy Lafleur, with his second goal of the game and ninth of the season, made it 3-3 at 17:29. Shutt, a 24-year-old left winger who had 45 goals last year, got the winner 29 seconds later with Lafleur and Guy Lapointe assisting on the play.

"The Leafs had a good game plan," said Montreal coach Scotty Bowman. "They wanted to slow down the play and they did. They played the way they wanted and we expected them to."

Chicago, playing its second consecutive game without injured Bobby Orr, put little pressure on Flyers netminder Bernie Parent, managing only 12 shots in the first two periods as the Flyers built a 3-1 lead.

Orr, who also missed Chicago's 3-0 loss Tuesday to the Barons, is expected to be sidelined for about a week while he rests a tender left knee, which has received five operations in recent years.

Race Days Over

John L. Greer, Knoxville businessman and owner of the three-year-old horse, said Thursday Foolish Pleasure will be shipped from New York to Lexington, Ky., next week and will stand at stud at Greentree Farms beginning early next year.

Bargaining Table NHL's Preference Over Courtroom

TORONTO (CP) — Chicago Black Hawks and Boston Bruins settled one argument Thursday night over defenceman Bobby Orr, at urging of the National Hockey League.

But the problem of compensation for the 28-year-old star may not be solved until the end of the season.

The hassle brought the NHL board of governors together in an emergency meeting Thursday morning. League president Clarence Campbell met with the governors, talked to officials of the Bruins and Hawks, went back to the governors, then finally got a written agrement from the two teams.

"I now have a written agreement from both clubs that they will immediately terminate pending litigation," Campbell told a news conference.

Signing the agreemet, the NHL said, were Paul Mooney, president of the Bruins, and William W. Wirtz, president of the Black Hawks.

The Bruins and Hawks are expected to get together to work out their problems, the NHL said, but if they don't agree by June 1, 1977, an arbitratory — likely Campbell — would be appointed to decide compensation for Orr.

Orr became a free agent last June 1 after playing 10 seasons with the Bruins. He signed a five-year $2.85 million contract with the Hawks last summer.

Campbell hopes Orr — who has had five operations on his left knee — will be alowed to continue with the Hawks for the remainder of the season and then, at the conclusion, the teams will get together to settle the matter of compensation.

The feud began shortly after Orr gained his free-agent status and went to the Hawks. Alan Eagleson, Orr's agent, said the Bruins waived compensation and the Hawks echoed his statement. The Bruins denied it, however.

Scorpions Set—Almost!

Victoria Scorpions, who came within six pooints f winning the Canadian senior men's basketball championship last spring, have added two players to this year's squad whom they feel may make up the difference.

The two newcomers are Bill Robinson of Chemainus and, a member of Canada's national team, and University of Victoria coach Ken Shields.

Robinson has been no stranger to Island basketball fans since his high school days and was a member of Scorpions a few years ago before pursuing his avocation in several parts of Canada and Europe. He is generally acknowledged as one of the finest guards in Canada.

Shields is six, feet, four inches in height and previously played with the Calgary Dinosaurs and UBC Thunderbirds and includes a national inter-collegiate title among his accomplishments.

A third addition could be Mike Gains, a six-foot, four-inch forward who played for James Bay of the Senior "B" Men's League last year. He has been working out with the team and will make the trip to Seattle this weekend.

Other changes will see scoring champion and most valuable player in the Canadian, Bob Burrows missing the first two exhibition games of the season. Burrows has been on vacation and won't be ready for action for at least another week.

Dave Mulcahy, the Scorpions' centre for most of last season, is holidaying in Europe and not expected to return until January, while Chris Hall will be lost to the club early in November for about a six week period. Hall is to have surgery on his troublesome shoulder. He has had a number of shoulder separations in his athletic career.

A permanent absentee will be guard Grant Boland who will play for the UVic Vikings.

Scorpions won the Dogwood League championship last year but it is uncertain if they will be playing in the that league this season.

After earlier announcing that the club would play only exhibition games, sponsor Ian Scott Moncrief decided he would try again to reconcile differences with Dogwood League officials, and until this week it appeared the league might make a go of it.

Now there is some doubt because of the financial problems plaguing the league.

Scorpions were scheduled to open the season with games at Burnaby, Oct. 30 and 31. Scorpions will honor that commitment but that may turn out to be only an exhibition series.

However, this shouldn't cause any undue problems as Scott-Moncrief earlier this year booked a full schedule of exhibition games just in case Scorpions did decide to pull out.

As matters now stand, Scorpions will play two games in Seattle this weekend, fill the Burnaby dates next weekend and then play their first games at home against the Vikings, Nov. 5-6, at the UVic gymnasium.

Vancouver Capilanos will be visitors at the old UVic gym on Nov. 13-14. Scorpions will use the old UVic gym as a home base this year.

The Canadian championships next spring will be held in St. John's, Newfoundland, and will be contested on a different format than the round-robin confusion that marked the tournament here last spring. This year any province wishing to enter the championship may do so. Last year regional playoffs were held to determine the four finalists.

Winnipeg St. Andrews Super Saints defeated the Scorpions 83-77 in the final and deciding game of the 1976 championship to take the title.

Scorpions also have a trip tentatively planned to New Zealand, Jan. 22-26, for the New Zealand Games which will be held at Christ Church. One Canadian entry will be accepted and Windsor, which finished third in the Canadian, is the only other team to apply.

Earlier it was announced the Scorpions had planned a trip to Cuba but apparently this has fallen through.

Fish and Game Executive Rejects Enhancement Fee

Some rambling notes along the trail:

I don't believe it . . .. In the monthly newsletter of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association, two and one-half pages are taken up expounding the virtues of having an additional $3 tagged on the basic $2 saltwater fishing licence to be earmarked for enhancing sports fishing salmon stocks . . . Then come the last three lines . . . "After due consideration, the executive of the Victoria Fish and Game Protective Association voted to approve the $2 data recovery licence only." . . . No reasons were given for the move.

* * *

It seems rather ludicrous (but perhaps typical) that the federal government plans to extend our territorial waters to 200 miles on Jan. 1 and then turns around and axes funding for our fisheries patrol vessels . . . Cutbacks in government spending are necessary . . . But how about doing some paring of unnecessary spending . . . Perhaps a little could be lopped off or transferred to fisheries from that $115 million set aside in the 1976 budget for "bilingualism development."

* * *

Monofilament fishing line is subject to a number of woes which can be corrected in a simple manner . . . Line coil, caused when the monofilament is wound tightly onto the spool while wet, and line twist, caused by not using a proper swivel for active terminal gear, can both be removed by paying out most of our line and trolling it behind the boat en route to your fishing grounds . . . New mono also tends to set in coils . . . These can be removed by soaking the line for about an hour in water before its first use.

* * *

Michael Rose topped the monthly Frostbite Derby for Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association by landing an 18 pound, 11 ounce chinook Sunday . . . Ron Perks was second with a 9:11 coho and Garry Vaughan's 6:02-pounder earned third spot . . . Hidden-weight winners were Stephen Davies, Mel Lohr and Roddie Chow.

* * *

Winter isn't far off . . . We were up in the hills between Port Renfrew and Cowichan Lake last Sunday and the puddles were still frozen in the afternoon . . . Mt. Arrowsmith and Green Mountain have already received a dusting of snow.

* * *

Some good news . . . After two bad years the coho have returned to Cowichan Bay in good numbers and bucktail flies, trolled behind a pearl spinner on a long line at slow speed, have worked best . . . Top color choices have been blue and white, Coronation and Grey Ghost . . . Other terrific coho catches have come from the vicinity of Secretary Island at Sooke . . . This means the fishing should be good from Pedder Bay to Oak Bay this weekend as the runs move through.

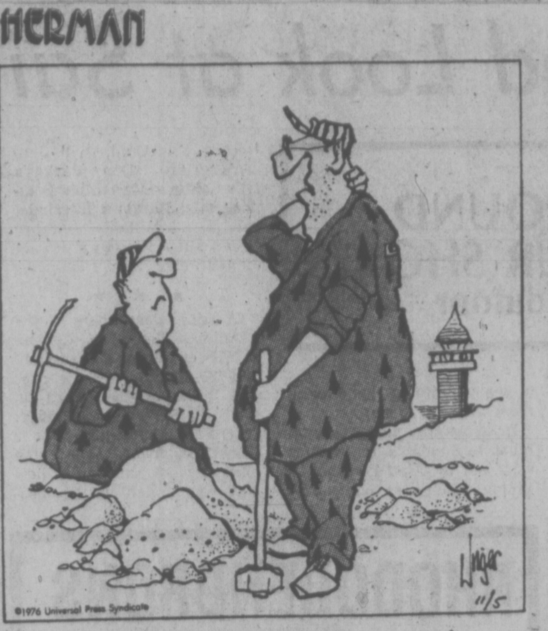
Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing



"Don't laugh, my wife thinks I'm in South America with two million bucks."

'Matter of Pride' With Jim Colbert

And the articulate Colbert took a major step toward achieving that goal with a solid, three-under-par 67 that staked him to the first-round lead Thursday in the cold first round of the $125,000 Southern Open golf tournament, the next-to-last event that counts on the official money-winning list for the professional golf tour.

Colbert now is the 60th man on the list, a position that's sometimes called the hot seat. It's the cut-off position for determining exemptions for next year's tour events.

"I'm in the top 50 all-time money-winners (also an exempt status), so I'll be exempt next year no matter what," Colbert said. "But making the top 60 is a matter of pride with me. I've been there for the last nine years and I want to be there again.

One stroke back of Colbert at 68 after the round that was played on the windblown 6,791-yard Green Island Country Club course were defending champion Hubert Green, Mac McLendon and George Archer.

Tough Task for Ontario

By MAX LOW

Times Staff

Containing the dynamic B.C. forwards will be Ontario's big problem when the Canadian inter-provincial rugby final for the Carling Bowl kicks off at 2:30 p.m. Saturday at Royal Athletic Park.

If Ontario, which squeezed past Newfoundland 19-16 and downed Quebec 22-9 in the eastern playoffs, can hold its own against the strong B.C. pack, fans could be in for one of the most exciting games of the season.

A preliminary match between St. Michael's University School of Victoria and traditional rival St. George's of Vancouver, starting at 12:30 p.m., could also be a thriller.

Possession will be the key to victory in the national final, though.

The B.C. forwards are big and strong, and have been well-trained by coach Tillman Briggs of Victoria. Five of the eight in the pack are from Briggs' own James Bay Athletic Association club.

And in the backs B.C. has plenty of class and speed to be able to make the most of all that possession. With attacking fullback Jim Wenman of Oak Bay Wanderers, strong-running Wes Thomas of Cowichan and Spence McTavish of UBC Old Boys, who is considered to be one of the best wing-three-quarters in the world, in the line the crowd should expect lots of thrills.

The UBC trio of scrum-half Preston Wiley, standoff-half John Billingsley and centre Rob Greig form a fine combination and outside them Rick Sim of Vancouver Meralomas is a tricky runner.

In all, it's a team that could add up to a lot of trouble for Ontario.

Rugby is one of the world's great team games. The cohesion and team spirit count for so much. But then, so too does experience. And B.C. has plenty of that up its sleeve with no less than 12 players — including three of the reserves — having played for Canada.

Ontario, which arrives pretty much an unknown quantity, has only three squad members who have represented their country — the captain, wing-forward Godfrey Nicholson of Brantford, scrum-half Peter Cholerton of Hamilton and leftwinger Irvin Fleming of Sarnia.

But Ontario could well be the big surprise of the season. As Tillman Briggs says: "You never know!"

BOWLERS OF THE WEEK

Returning to winners' circles are Don Brown (left) and Ken Grexton, who captured Bowler-of-the-Week laurels during second week of 14th annual Victoria Times-sponsored contest. Don, who won Bowler-of-the-Year crown last season, topped men's fivepin division with 301-280-347—928 series in Friday Classic League at Town and Country Lanes while Ken landed men's tenpin honors with 247-225-159—631 series in Northridge League at Mayfair Lanes.

VIKINGS DROP OPENER OF SOCCER PLAYOFFS

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Thunderbirds defeated Victoria Vikings, 1-0, in the first round of the Canada West University soccer championships Thursday. Claudio Morelli scored the lone goal 15 minutes into the second half.

Both teams now travel to Saskatoon Oct. 30 to complete round-robin games against the Universities of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

The tournament winner advances to the Canadian collegiate championship in Montreal November 13-14.

Gulls Top Trios To Share First

Dan Walushka, Terry Therrien and Geoff Whitney-Griffiths fired two goals each Thursday night to lead Juan de Fuca King John Gulls to a 8-3 victory over Oak Bay Trios in a South Vancouver Island Junior "B" Hockey League game at Oak Bay Recreation Centre.

Year-Around Look at Sailing Beauty

Former navy type and longtime sailing buff Don Ross is responsible for the outstanding Beken calendars you see around town.

British photogapher Ken Beken is known all over Europe for his dramatic pictures of yachts, and to have a whole calendar of them is to be able to look at a year-full of treasures.

Don got the idea of starting a Canadian agency for the line after his sister-in-law complained she was unable to get one.

The name, Ken Beken, became a household name years ago when Beken's grandfather started in the business at Cowes. I'd forgotten — until Don showed me the 1977 calendars — how masterful an artist Beken is.

There are two on the market, one of racing yachts and the other, mainly of the tall ships that gathered in New York this year for our southern neighbor's bicentennial.

Don's brainwave seems to have paid up. Local stores tell me they're selling like the proverbial hotcake, to rag-haulers and landlubbers alike.

AROUND OUR SHORES

The fledgling Saanich Peninsula Sailing Association, formed for dinghy sailors, now has 75 members on its rolls. Henry Niezen tells me the dinghy enclosure in Tulista Park at Sidney is finished and now they're getting down to completing the ramp and breakwater. They'll take time off, however, on Sunday for some racing, beginning at 1:30 p.m.

Royal Victoria Yacht Club keel boats will join in with boats from the Turkey Head Sailing Association for two around - the - buoy races this Sunday. The races begin at 10 a.m. and 1:30 p.m.

RVYC Laser sailors will be racing again at Cadboro Bay on Saturday with things getting under way at 1:30 p.m. In the two races sailed last Saturday, Peter Copeland won the first and was runner-up to Bob Britten in the second. Coming after Peter in the first sailout were Dave Teece and Rick McBride, Charles Simpson placed third in the last race.

★ ★ ★

The Canoe Bay Sailing Club has another six-miler slated for Saturday, starting 1 p.m. in the vicinity of the government wharf at Sidney.

Brisk winds added excitement to Sunday's race which was won by Alan Dickinson's Viking. After her came Bud Peetz's Sea Quill, Will Jensen's Tiara, Don Parker's Irides, Steve Meredith's Solution, John Barker's Interlude, Sandy McMillan's Amber Green, Roy Hingley's Romada and Peter Grant's Skaga.

Cruising class boats of the Esquimalt Squadron, Canadian Forces Sailing Association, and the squadron's Sailerettes will have another race in their B series on Sunday. Start time is 10:30 a.m.

Ole Backhaus called the other day to announce he's still very much in the business of building and repairing boats. Philbrook's are now leasing the property where he used to run the Harbor Boat Builders, next to Van-Isle Marina.

Ole moved his business to 10222 Bower Bank about six months ago and reports his latest job is a 35-foot fiberglass Endurance. Having seen Ole's work in the past, she's bound to be a credit to the local boating scene.

He's a $6 Million Man

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Julius Erving, the gifted forward with the dazzling moves, has been sold by New York Nets to Philadelphia 76ers in a National Basketball Association deal estimated to be worth $6 million. The agreement, worked out at an all-night meeting in New York Thursday, made a rich man of Erving, a title contender and box office smash of the Sixers and a disaster area of the Nets. It also increased speculation that Nets owner Roy Boe may be planning to unload the franchise.

Terms call for Erving to receive approximately $3 million over a five-year contract. That's $600,000 a year and is believed to make Dr. J the highest paid player in pro basketball, topping the reported $500,000 annual salary Los Angeles Lakers pay Kareem Abdul-Jabbar.

In addition, Boe will get about $3 million to help pay his mounting debts. He had already paid $3.2 milion to join the NBA and owes another $4 million to New York Knicks for territorial infringement.

"I guess Boe's got enough money now to rebuild," said Erving. But has he enough fans? The Nets did not draw well with Erving. They could be in big trouble without him.

The transaction came in the wake of a bitter contract dispute between the Nets and their six-foot-seven superstar. Erving refused to report to training camp, claiming he wanted his contract renegotiated. He still had four years remaining on a seven-year pact for an estimated $1.9 million.

Boe refused and said Erving was being led astray by his agent, Irwin Weiner. Boe said five teams — Philadelphia, the Knicks, Milwaukee, Los Angeles and Buffalo — approached him about acquiring Erving. And Philadelphia came up with the best offer.

"My fellow owners and I regret that this action became necessary, but we had absolutely no alternative in light of Erving's refusal to play under the terms of a legal and binding contract," said a statement released by Boe.

Erving scores points in bunches, specializing in awesome slam dunks. He averaged 29.3 points a game and contributed his share of rebounds and assists last season as the Nets won their second ABA crown.

Island Drivers Collect Awards

Vancouver Island drivers captured nearly half of the 25 class awards when over-all points from the five Four-Wheel-Drive Association of B.C.-sanctioned rallies were compiled.

Included in the list of 11 Island winners were three husband-wife teams, two from Duncan and one from Victoria.

Victoria's Ron and Marian Thibodeau collected enough points in their stock Toyota Landcruiser during the five rallies held in various parts of the province, including one in Victoria over the Thanksgiving weekend, to capture the "H" class crowns.

Debbie Oster of Nanaimo ("B" class), Liz Williamson of Duncan ("E" class) and Jeannie Christianson of Victoria ("A" class) captured women's titles.

No More Night Games, Please!

FOXBORO, Mass. (AP) — The local police chief called it the worst such outbreak of violence he'd seen, and a state senator called a legislative hearing aimed at curbing future incidents.

It wasn't the aftermath of an urban riot, but the post-game disturbance by fans during and after Monday night's National Football League game at Schaefer Stadium.

The statistics told the story: New England Patriots 41, New York Jets 7; two spectators dead; one fan stabbed; a police officer assaulted and injured and 49 arrests.

"It's the first time we've had a situation as bad as this," said Police Chief Daniel McCarthy. "You can hope and pray they never have another night game."

The cold weather, the late starting time of 9 p.m., the lopsided scoring that lost fan interest and unusual levels of drunkeness were blamed for the nightmarish display.

The protests have reached Beacon Hill where Senator Michael LoProesti asked officials of the area's four professional teams, the state police and the police departments of Boston and Foxboro to offer remedies at a State House hearing Friday.

LoProesti said Tuesday the game was marred by ugly events, adding sports must be made safe for the average spectator to enjoy with his family.

An ambulance attendant giving mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to one of the victims in the stands said someone urinated on his back while he worked.

A Foxboro police officer was assaulted, his jaw broken and his gun stolen. Fans scattered as the thief waved the gun, inviting other officers to "come and get me." The man was subdued and the gun retrieved.

A photographer on the field said a cherry bomb exploded about two feet behind him, and an elderly woman was hit over the head with a bottle. One fan's wheelchair was stolen.

Athletics Pad Hold On First

Victoria Athletics extended their lead to three points over Western Homes Buckaroos by beating the second-place squad 5-4 in a South Island Big Six Hockey League game Thursday night at Pearkes Arena.

Gord Neilson scored two goals and goalkeeper Reg Wonnerberg blocked 35 shots to spark the Athletics. Single goals were added by Brian Preston, Graham Brown and Brian Hamilton.

Bill Pettinger (2), Doug Burger and Randy Krantz replied for Bucks.

Skaters Picked As Canada Reps

OTTAWA (CP) — Susan MacDonald, 16, of Vancouver and Heather, Kemkaran, 18, of Toronto will represent Canada in the Richmond Trophy figure skating competition in England Oct. 31-Nov. 1.

The competition for senior women, which has sometimes been a springboard to world prominence, was won last year by Lynn Nightingale of Ottawa, the first time by a Canadian.

The Canadian Figure Skating Association also named Jim Szabo, 18, of Coquitlam, and Joyce Fordyce, 14, of Vancouver, to compete in Prague Skate in Czechoslovakia Nov. 4-7.

Charles Honored

CINCINNATI (AP) — Ezzard Charles, former world been honored by having a street in his home town named after him. Cincinnati city council voted to rename Lincoln Park Drive as Ezzard Charles Drive. The boxer died last year at the age of 53.

The copper mine that's also a cattle ranch

Just eight miles from Kamloops city centre, work is underway on a major industrial project. It's called Afton, and will include a copper mine and mill, plus B.C.'s first modern copper smelter. But Afton interests extend beyond mining. The company already has a herd of 250 cattle on the rangelands surrounding the proposed minesite…and they'll continue in the cattle business, even after the mine is in operation.

The close association of cattle ranching and industrial activity places special demands on environmental protection…and the Afton people are going all out in this regard. Advanced pollution control systems, combined with the nature of the ore, will make the Afton copper smelter the cleanest in North America.

The Afton project will make a major contribution to the economy… providing 350 new jobs at the minesite, and supporting more than 2,000 others in service industries related to mining. And because over 99 per cent of the company's shareholders are Canadian, dividends and profits from Afton will be kept in this country.

Afton is one more example of how mining makes a natural resource work for B.C.

Why Did This 'Name' Play Flop?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The play had all the hallmarks of success: a script by George Ryga, writer of The Ecstasy of Rita Joe; west coast actor Eric Schneider in the lead role; competent director Tom Kerr; good reviews in local newspapers; a successful trial run in the Okanagan Valley.

Why then did George Ryga's Ploughmen of the Glacier flop as disastrously as it did here this summer?

The play was commissioned by the Okanagan Mainline Regional Arts Council and played to an estimated 4,000 Okanagan residents in April and May.

Money for the Vancouver performances was plentiful, advanced by a company called MST Associates. So confident was the company that it had plans to book the play into a church hall for further performances after its opening run, with the United Nations Habitat Conference taking over its original theatre.

But the play never made it to the hall.

Its opening night drew an audience of only 50, many of them guests of the producers.

The meagre crowd moved newspaper columnist Jack Wasserman to upbraid theatre-goers for their lack of support of B.C. talent, concluding that the good reviews should help swell crowds at the theatre.

The night the column appeared, a mere 40 people showed up in the 320-seat David Y. H. Lui Theatre. The Saturday matinee drew 18 lonely patrons. In a total of seven performances, the play drew a mere 239 paying customers.

Shortly after the closing performance, the producer, Chris Starkey was found at his regular job, at a B.C. Hydro liquefied natural gas plant in nearby Delta.

"Manual labor—good for the soul," said Mr. Starkey. Good also for the bank balance. Mr. Starkey, along with partners Art Tomlinson, a construction accountant, and John Mclaughlin, with the Weightwatchers organization, had just dropped an estimated $35,000.

"It was a producer's dream," said Mr. Starkey.

"Everything about the production was name—Ryga as playwright, Tom Kerr as director, Eric Schneider as actor. Everybody was ready to go. All we had to do was pay the salaries, rent the theatre and do a little public relations."

It spelled financial ruin for MST Associates, formed by the three men late last year as a private production company which, with the aid of volunteer labor, had produced two plays earlier and had broken even.

Ploughmen of the Glacier seemed a golden opportunity for the fledgling producers, but turned into a bath in red ink and Mr. Starkey doesn't really know why.

He said he isn't bitter, but he wonders about the cultural taste of Canadians.

"But you have to ask yourself if Canadians are really interested in developing an identity. I mean, are we a bunch of TV addicts? Do we really have a cultural identity? Or did we ever have one?

Joy Metcalfe is a publicist whose duties regularly include promoting plays. She was excited about the opportunity to promote the new Ryga effort.

"With those names—Ryga, Kerr and Schneider—no way could I turn it down. I thought I'd just run a few ads and it would sell out."

Complicating her job was the fact that Mr. Ryga, a provider of good newspaper copy, had to be in Edmonton for another opening. But arrangements had been made for reporters to phone Mr. Ryga at his Summerland, B.C., home for advance stories on the play.

None of the major papers took advantage of the opportunity.

"When I saw there was no advance in the newspapers, I was just sick," she said.

But even so, the publicist admits, theatre-goers were aware of the play, despite the lack of advance stories.

"I guess you have to go back to the fact that Vancouverites are lackadaisical."

Mr. Ryga, who finally arrived the day after the play closed, has his own ideas about why the play flopped.

He has his doubts about the $5 ticket prices for a play with only three actors and minimal set design.

"It could easily be produced at the poverty level," said the playwright.

But he does have his doubts about whether the lack of success does indeed speak ill of the taste of Vancouverites.

"It would be easy to blame the audience, to say people are jaded.

"But if anything is wrong, I would say it is our ability to launch a production that people are willing to see and that, if anything, is a criticism of the times."

Flight Cancelled

ERIE, Pa. (AP) — Allegheny Airlines has announced plans to drop a morning flight to Toronto from Erie, saying passenger revenues do not justify the service. The airline said the schedule change is effective Oct. 31.

MAN IN WHEELCHAIR BECOMES TRUE CHAMPION

MONTREAL (CP)—Seven years ago Rene Masse never dreamed he would represent Canada in the Olympic or PanAmerican Games for the handicapped.

He wasn't in a wheelchair then either.

The months he spent in a Montreal hospital were trying, he says. "I just wouldn't accept the fact that I was paralysed. I planned to return to my job as a crane operator and take my family back to the North."

He finally came to terms with his disability with the help of a compassionate hospital staff and became a manpower counellor for the Canadian Paraplegic Association.

Masse decided if he couldn't go back to the North he'd bring something of his life there with him.

A dedicated sports fan and amateur runner, Masse heard from a co-worker that track and field was being practised by people in wheelchairs.

That's all the prodding he needed.

Masse currently holds dozens of medals for events both in Canada and abroad, as well as the international record for the 400-metre dash.

Although his strength is in racing, he also competes in weightlifting, bowling and javelin and discus throwing, training tirelessly before the events.

In additions to working at home on a platform of his own design, he has a membership at a local gymnasium.

Schoolbook Stereotypes Rapped

TORONTO — James Doris, an Ontario education ministry official, says elementary school textbooks are full of sexual, racial and class stereotyping. Many school books do not properly show the role of blacks, ethnic groups, women, the elderly or laborers, he said Thursday.

WASHINGTON — J. Edgar Hoover's supporters are raising $500,000 for a monument and scholarship fund honoring the man who was FBI director for 48 years. The fund raising comes in the wake of disclosures in congressional hearings and news stories about Hoover's use of the FBI to harass and spy on civil rights leader Martin Luther King. "We feel very close to Mr. Hoover and still think he's one of the great men," said Charles Stanley of Little Rock, Ark., president of the fund.

KITCHENER, Ont. — A former truck driver with a terminal disease of the motor nerves says he began to believe in miracles Thursday when hundreds of Ontario residents donated more than $13,000 for treatment he thinks may save his life. Heinz Petersen, 52, whose hands and legs are paralysed by amytrophic lateral sclerosis, appealed for aid after he got a call from a clinic in Florida that has helped half the 500 persons it has treated. Petersen quit his job because of the disease, which usually kills its victims after three to 12 years, and the family's monthly income was less than $600, supplemented by a small pension.

ANCHORAGE — Everyone is equal in the eyes of the law. That includes Alaskan Gov. Jay Hammond, whose car was towed away from an illegal parking zone Thursday. It was bailed out after a $17.50 towing charge was paid.

SEATTLE — William Syrotuck, 46, who founded and headed a number of search and rescue organizations in this region, has died. Cause of death Thursday was not given.

JOHANNESBURG — Jazz pianist fDave Brubeck announced Thursday he has cancelled scheduled concerts in Durban because no black audiences would be allowed. Brubeck is performing in Johannesburg before racially segrgated audiences with certain eveinings reserved for blacks and other evenings for whites. "Fortunately, our Cape Town concerts are totally integrated, Brubeck said. "I've met so many fantastic people here — black and white — it is inconceivable that they are not allowed to enjoy the same shows together."

PHOENIX — The trial of John Adamson on charges of murdering investigative reporter Don Bolles will have to start all over again because a prosecutor talked too much out of court. A judge declared a mistrial Thursday on grounds of "massive prejudicial publicity" caused by the public comments of Maricopa county attorney Donald Harris, who said — while jury selection was going on — that murder charges were near against six other persons in the car-bomb slaying.

Brown

BROWN FINALLY OUT OF PRISON

NEW YORK — Rap Brown, the fiercy advocate of militant black action in the 1960's, was set free Thursday after the last federal charges against him were dismissed by a federal court in New Orleans.

It was the first time in nearly five years that Brown was out of prison, and the first time in nine years that he did not face federal charges.

The justice department in Washington confirmed Brown was released from custody in Brooklyn, where he had been taken by federal authorities after being paroled earlier Thursday fron a state prison in Stormville, N.Y.

The officials were preparing to transfer him to New Orleans for a new trial on a federal gun charge originally lodged in 1967, but a U.S. District Court judge there dropped the charges on the recommendation of U.S. Attorney Gerald Gallinghouse.

Czechs Ignore Native Son's Oscars

PRAGUE (Reuter)—When Czechoslovak film director Milos Forman won five Oscars this year for One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest, the event has not been reported in his own country, to which he has not returned since 1968.

And precisely because he never returned, his film—like his earlier works—is not likely to be seen here.

The film industry, like any other medium, is strictly controlled by the government and is in the front line of the "ideological struggle."

As in most Communist countries, Czechoslovakia's film industry is free from financial problems, as profit is not a determining factor in the production policy.

But ideological constraints provide other limits and Czechoslovak films have little success even at home where people line up to see American productions such as The Great Gatsby or The Sting.

The Czechoslovak cinema, one of the oldest in Europe, gained world recognition in the mid-1960s with directors like Forman, Jiri Menzel (Closely Watched Trains) and Vera Chytilova (The Little Daisies).

It was hit by the political events of 1968, like every other sector of the cultural life here, and the "normalization" policy still is very much a reality.

The official truth nowadays is that former party leader Alexander Dubcek's attempt at socialism with a human face was in fact a counter-revolution in the making and that the Russian-led invasion which put an end to it was a fraternal gesture from fellow Socialist countries.

Anyone who does not agree with that simply does not make films.

The current national production ranges from musicals to thrillers and includes an unusual proportion of war and historic films.

Much of the talent has gone, as many directors from the "new wave" have emigrated. A few, like Menzel, have compromised and are slowly re-entering the state-controlled industry, but with no great success so far.

Others are simply idle.

They have become "non-persons," like many other artists and intellectuals who, because they refuse to give allegiance to the new regime, simply are not allowed to work.

Even those who manage to placate the government-controlled cinema establishment, totally controlled by a party dominated commission, can still hit the snags of orthodoxy.

FALLING U.K. POUND AIDS FILM INDUSTRY

Written for CP
By Norman Cribbens

ELSTREE, England (CP)— The further the British pound falls the healthier it looks for Britain's hard-hit film industry.

For the first time in years, all the major film studios are occupied and sound stages that used to be empty for nine months of the year, are swarming with activity. Technicians, cameramen, editors, actors and script writers are flooding through the gates of Elstree and its sister studios at Shepperton, Pinewood and Bray.

Elstree has actually turned a substantial loss into a small profit. Eight of its sound stages have been humming with Star Wars, a big-budget science fiction film being made by 20th Century-Fox. This will be followed by Ken Russell's Valentino, starring Rudolph Nureyev, and another Hollywood feature entitled Julia.

But for the falling pound, these films would have been made in California. Over the last two years 500 Elstree employees were laid off by the shrinking British film industry. Today three-quarters of them are back at work.

At nearby Shepperton, 10 sound stages were used on major films such as The Pink Panther Strikes Again, starring Peter Sellers. At Pinewood, also near London, 15 sound stages were pressed into use for the new James Bond film The Spy Who Loved Me.

Two popular television serials, Space 1999, and The Avengers have also been in production at Pinewood.

Seven major British films have been on location including the $10-million war epic A Bridge Too Far and Superman, another expensive production starring Burt Reynolds.

Warner Brothers of Hollywood are so confident of a bright future for Britain's film industry that they are to invest $15 million in six films during the coming year.

A spokesman for Elstree studios said: "The continuing devaluation of sterling makes film-making fantastically cheap in Britain compared with production costs in the United States.

"The cost of shooting a film here is less than half the cost of shooting it in California or New York."

Many of the films now under production in Britain are being made by Americans who left London in droves when Britain introduced new tax laws. They said the British film industry was finished.

"It's been years since British films had it so good," said Alan Sapper, general secretary of the Association of Cinematograph and Television Technicians.

Test Conducted

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The Soviet Union apparently conducted an underground nuclear test Wednesday at its Arctic test site, the United States Energy Research and Development Administration said. "Seismic signals, presumably from a Soviet underground nuclear explosion, were recorded by the U.S. atomic energy detection system," ERDA said in a statement issued in Washington. ERDA said it had no indication of the size of the test.

Ethiopia Accused Of Torture, Murder

By PATRICK KEATLEY
Manchester Guardian

LONDON — The military government of Ethiopia is accused of the murder of 1,225 of its political opponents and the systematic torture of hundreds more in concentration camps in a nine-page document brought here by an emissary of the underground opposition party, the Ethiopian People's Revolutionary Party (EPRP).

The emissary, travelling under the pseudonym Ato Mamo — a common Ethiopian name — has shown his material to the Guardian and is presenting it to officials of Amnesty International at their headquarters here, asking them to bring pressure for a full investigation.

Mamo, on a visit to Western Europe, the first external mission organized by EPRP, is taking other copies of his material to the International Commission of Jurists in Geneva and to the United Nations for submission to the Human Rights Commission.

The dossier tells on Page 6 of the torture of a student named Endrias. He was a student compulsorily inducted into the rural development campaign set up by the present regime soon after it came to power three years ago, according to the document.

The EPRP account, obtained through sources within the armed forces, describes how Endrias was arrested in Harar, the fortress city in a mountainous region of Ethiopia, where there is a divisional headquarters.

In rotation, it is alleged, he was put first into a barrel of superheated oil, then laid out screaming on a mattress to receive electric shock torture. Then, when he had fainted, lowered into a bath of icy water, which restored him to consciousness. The process was repeated, the report says, until he died.

Other episodes of torture of supporters of EPRP are reported by those who survived. In Holetta, it is claimed, prisoners were stripped naked and told, as gunpoint, to roll on human excretia. In the Kaffa region a local commander allegedly forces prisoners to mix their urine with mud and then drink it.

The object of these treatments is said to be to try to obtain names of EPRP leaders and members of the smaller regional groups that are also opposed to the present regime.

AIB Moves To Cut Pilots' Hike

OTTAWA (CP) — The Anti-Inflation Board has recommended that pay increases negotiated by pilots working for three regional airlines should be reduced by up to 5.5 per cent.

Negotiated raises of 13.54 per cent in the first year and 14.07 per cent in the second year for 94 pilots employed by Transair Ltd. of Winnipeg should be reduced to 12.75 and 8.45 per cent respectively, the board said.

The board also called for pay raises of 9.67 and 7.85 per cent in the first and second years of a contract for 85 pilots of Eastern Provincial Airways of Gander, Nfld. The employees had negotiated raises of 14.70 and 12.12 per cent respectively.

Proposed raises of 12.26 per cent for 138 pilots employed by Nordair Ltd. should be reduced to 10.07 per cent, the board said.

MANITOBA RIGHTS ACT PENALTY $400

WINNIPEG (CP) — A single woman with two small children, refused rental of a house, has received a $400 settlement in the first test of recent changes in the Manitoba Human Rights Act.

The Manitoba Human Rights Commission said Wednesday it was found the woman was refused rental because she was a single parent with two small children.

The voluntary settlement between the woman and the rental firm involved a home in the Winnipeg area, and was negotiated by the board under a new section of the legislation.

House Razed

MILL BAY — A house near the Mill Bay ferry road was destroyed by fire Wednesday night. Shawnigan Lake RCMP believe the house was vacant at the time.

TIMBER SALES SUSPENDED

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — All timber sales in national forests have been suspended temporarily because of a new timber management bill passed by Congress.

The suspension became public when the Willamette National Forest abruptly postponed a 152-acre sale in the Blue River area east of Eugene, scheduled for bid opening Wednesday.

VIETNAM MAY BACK THAI LEFTISTS

BANGKOK (UPI) — Thailand's new anti-Communist military regime and the Communist government of Vietnam appear to be manoeuvring onto a collision course.

A senior Western diplomat with access to current thinking in Hanoi said he anticipated Vietnam and its close ally, Laos, would begin providing arms and logistical support to Thai leftists "once the Thais show they're serious about a revolution."

Among professional Indochina watchers here, there is a broad belief that neither Vietnam nor Laos would intervene directly with their own troops in a Thai civil war should one evolve.

But the Thai-language newspapers reported an armed attack by Laotian troops on a Thai border police patrol outpost in the northeastern province of Loei.

According to the reports, carried by the Daily News and Thai Rath, both of which are censored by the military authorities, the Pathet Lao forces attacked in "company strength." One village defence volunteer was reported killed in the seven-hour clash, which reportedly ended at 1 a.m. Monday, when the Pathet Lao retreated.

Radio Thailand reported a similar attack in Loei province last Thursday. The report was broadcast only once and not repeated "because it was not meant to be released to the public," a Thai information department source

Kitchens High-Risk Zone

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. government survey indicates that 63 per cent of home kitchens are high-risk zones for the two million to 10 million estimated cases of food poisoning in the country each year.

The risks are higher if the cook is less than 50 years old, better educated and part of a family with $15,000 or more income a year, says the report by Judith Jones and Jon Weimer of the agriculture department's Economic Research Service.

The nationwide survey, using a scientifically selected sample of 2,503 representative households, was conducted in 1974.

The focus of the study is the high-risk homemaker — those with an unnecessarily high potential of sickness due to possible contamination of food through such things as undercooking and poor refrigeration.

Too much faith on the part of the cook is a major part of the problem, the report says.

"Homemakers may place undue reliance upon government inspection functions for prevention of bacterial contamination of raw meat and poultry products," it concluded.

For example, U.S. agriculture department meat inspectors do not check or try to regulate the amount of salmonellae, the most common source of food poisoning, in slaughtered meat or processed products. The bacteria are present in the environment generally and it would be impractical to market sterile meat, the department said.

But 63 per cent of those surveyed thought it unlikely that government-inspected meat would carry such bacteria. The survey also found that 30 per cent would taste a suspected product to see if it were safe to eat, a potentially fatal act, the report said.

The Jones-Weimer analysis commented that one reason for the apparently "safer" kitchens among the older, less-educated and lower-income families is they are less apt to be buying vulnerable whole turkeys or beef or pork toasts.

It's Not 'Cheap' to Cut Funeral Cost

By LYNN GORDON

caveat emptor

Until recently, the amount of money spent on a funeral reflected the respect and love a family had for the deceased. It was expected that the family put everything into the last act as a symbol of their esteem — even if it meant financial hardship.

Public opinion has changed and although the majority of funerals are still costly and fairly elaborate, it is no longer considered "cheap" or in "bad taste" to want to reconsider the high cost of dying and to look for less expensive funeral services.

Funeral expenses can be divided into two major areas — costs paid to the funeral director for his and his staff's services, facilities and equipment, the casket and a vault; and the costs involved in disposing of the body, either by burial or cremation.

Cremation is the less expensive of the two but it is a method chosen in only about 10 per cent of deaths. Most people still choose the traditional burial.

First one needs to buy a grave — about $250 for a plot that will bury two people. Opening and closing will add another $160. Most people buy an outer case, which is about $75 if purchased from the cemetery and more if bought from the funeral director. Many also purchase a vault — a two-piece cement vault which fits into the grave to hold the casket — at about $200. Lastly, there's the cost of a monument or marker, the price of which depends on how elaborate it is.

If these costs are added to the funeral director's fee of $800 to $900 for a traditional funeral, it is not difficult to see how the total funeral bill reaches the $1,500 mark. It is, of course, possible to keep the funeral directors bill down to about $300 by cutting out all the frills, flowers, organists, memorial services and receiving in the funeral parlor. That would bring the total funeral to about $1,000.

Cremation will keep the bill substantially lower.

First there's the funeral director's fee, which could be anywhere from a modest $300 to a more elaborate service at $800 or $900. Add to that $100 for the cremation and another $150 can be added if an urn space (for two) is purchased at the cemetery.

In provinces where its permitted, ashes can be scattered over land or water free of charge by the family. Or they can be buried by the crematorium for a modest $20 or $30 charge.

Of course, it can be expensive to scatter the ashes, if some very elaborate and unusual method and/or location has been requested.

So it's possible to keep the costs down to about $400.

It is interesting to note the kind of people who choose cremation as the method of disposition of the body.

Ellie Elder of the Toronto Memorial Society says that 90 per cent of the society's members choose cremation. These are people from the age of 40 up who have pre-arranged their funerals through the Memorial Society. Most have chosen the lowest cost funeral, not because they cannot afford more elaborate or expensive arrangements, but because they want to see their money spent in other ways. The majority of the members, are professional people with better than average income and education.

It is difficult for anyone to think "coldly" at a time of a loved one's death. The tendency is to overspend and to do "this last thing properly for Harry."

Sometimes spending a lot of money on a funeral may be to ease the guilt for something the family feels should have been don while the person was alive — or it may be a fear of what Aunt Betty will say if we have a "cheap" funera.

It must be recognibed, however, that social and religious traditions are a comfort to many people and the encouragement to shop around for services in no way belittles the purpose or the comfort offered by tradition.

But problems can be avoided by pre-planning — by the person himself stating, preferably in writing, exactly what kind of a funeral he wants. The Memorial Societies across the country will help interested people to plan funerals — and funeral directors in most municipalities are more than willing to assist in pre-plainning.

Funeral services can also be prepaid — another hedge against inflation since the money paid today will be the price charged when the services are needed regardless of how much prices have increased.

Crib Death Linked to Milk

TORONTO (CP) — Infants who die suddenly in their cribs may be allergic to milk, says Dr. Claude Frazier, an allergy specialist from North Carolina.

The doctor said in an interview that sensitivity to milk is often overlooked as a cause of chronic illness, dramatic misbehavior and sudden death.

Frasier said early diagnosis of allergies means a better chance for a child to fight off allergies late in life.

He said 10 per cent of the United States population is allergy-prone and allergic conditions are suspected to be genetic.

He said one of the commonest methods of starting an allergy is overexposure to a certain food.

Often a pregnant woman will drink large quantities of milk, believing this will benefit her baby, the doctor said.

Frazier said if the allergy runs in either or both families, the baby may be allergic to milk. Breast feeding may save a baby from the allergy.

He also said more people die of insect stings than of snakebites in North America because death can result between 13 minutes to 15 minutes from a wasp sting.

He said an insect sting kit, containing a preloaded syringe of equinephrine, a tourniquet, antihistamine tablets and phenobarbital, should be included among first-aid supplies in many areas.

Frazier said he believes many insect sting victims have been misdiagnosed as having suffered a heart attack.

FUEL TABLETS EASY TO MAKE

Perhaps some of you readers who were in the military during The Second World War will remember these fuel tablets. They were used to heat K rations in the field.

In 1943 I was asked to develop a process for the mass production of fuel tablets to fill military needs. It was explained to me that the combination of apprehension and fear of the unknown, together with eating cold food, was causing many cases of stomach and intestinal problems in our troops.

We were successful in developing a high speed extrusion process to make these little bars and produced literally millions of them. And they're so handy that I use them to this day for starting fires and also as the sole heat source for cooking small quantities of food on outdoor trips. I think you'll find them to be useful as well. Here's the formula and procedure for making fuel tablets.

You'll need three lbs. PARAFFIN WAX, and four lbs. of fine SAWDUST, as well as some containers. I find that the paper tubes inside the rolls of bathroom tissue are excellent, but you'll need to tape one end closed to contain the product. Melt the paraffin in the top of a double boiler (NEVER over direct heat) and add the sawdust with stirring. Now here's the critical step. The sawdust will tend to separate from the wax and settle to the bottom. Therefore it's imperative that stirring be continued until the wax is just above the solidification point.

Then pour into the tubes and allow to harden. As a final step immerse the wax and tube into molten paraffin for a few seconds until the tube is impregnated. In this way, the tube becomes a wick for easy lighting. The tube and wax-sawdust combination can be cut into convenient segments with a saw.

2.7M Get Flu Shots

ATLANTA (AP) — More than 2.7 million Americans had receved swine flu shots by last weekend, the national Centre for Disease Control said. As of last Friday, over 21 million doses of swine flu vaccine and over 17 million doses of bivalent vaccine, which protects against both swine flu and A-Victoria flu, had been distributed, it said.

By LYNN and JOEL RAPP

DEAR LYNN and JOEL: I hope you will pass this advice along to your readers. It's about Christmas Cactus. Number one: Don't mist your plant. I was misting mine daily along with my other houseplants, not really thinking about the fact that it didn't need nor could stand the additional moisture. The cactus turned soft and started to discolor.

Number two: I had aphids on my scented geraniums, tried various methods to get rid of them, then, finally, in desperation I sprayed them with one part dish soap to 12 parts water and rinsed them off with clear water. The result: my geraniums died. What happened?

Also, have you ever heard of an ornamental herb called Dittany of Crete? I would appreciate any tips on its care and where it might be purchased. Sincerely. — S.W.

Dear S.W.: Number one: It really isn't necessary to mist your Christmas Cactus very often because it's a succulent.

What happened to your geraniums? Your homemade remedy simply didn't work. Aphids are much easier to control with an insecticide and, incidentally, never use a detergent soap in cleaning a plant no matter how diluted.

Finally, with regard to the Dittany of Crete (Origanum Dictamnus), we wouldn't know where you might buy one, yu'll just have to search around. But if you find one, here's what to do: This tender perennial, which will grow to a height of almost one foot if kept in good light, has small, woolly gray round leaves on trailing stems and develops rosy blossoms with large bracts in hop-like heads. Use the leaves as an aromatic tonic, the flowers for tea, and perhaps, if you ever get a toothache, rub some of the leaves on your gums. It might help and it certainly couldn't hurt your tooth.

Researchers Say Dying Of Fright Inherited

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Researchers believe that some people who die of fright or other stress may be suffering from hereditary hyperthermia.

Hyperthermia, found in one of every 5,000 to 6,000 persons, causes some surgical patients' temperature to rise to fatal levels when they are given anesthetic.

Fright affecting persons under stress can also be fatal if they suffer from malignant hypertherma, says Dr. Daniel Wingard. He is an anesthesiologist who heads a University of Nebraska team that studied several thousand patients in the last five years.

Death from hyperthermia apparently occurs when a person's metabolism runs wild, creating excessive body heat, which combines with acid and potassium to make the heart stop, Dr. Wingard said. The disease is sometimes misdiagnosed as a heart attack.

Stress, like anesthetic, can cause the metabolism "to turn on in excess," Dr. Wingard believes.

Once the trait is discovered in a family, he said, doctors take muscle biopsies to determine whether other members of the family are susceptible.

Help Bummer Quit, Cut Off Cigarettes

DEAR ABBY: A man in our office was told by his doctor to quit smoking. (Heart, emphysema and asthma.) Well, this guy decided that the best way to quit smoking was to quit BUYING cigarettes, and that's our problem.

He bums cigarettes from every smoker he sees, and I don't mean just one cigarette. Yesterday I gave him six, and several others in the office contributed, too.

It's awfully hard to turn down a guy who asks for a cigarette, but I'm fed up with his bumming. If he's going to smoke, don't you think he should buy his own?

Nobody in this office has the nerve to tell him — including me. Any suggestions? — CHICKEN

DEAR CHICKEN: If a diabetic asked you for sugar, would you give it to him? And would you give an alcoholic a drink? The cigarette bummer desperately needs support from his co-workers to help him to quit his habit. Be a friend and say no.

DEAR ABBY: My fiance is 28 and I am 24. Jeff's friends are having a stag party for him, and from what I hear about the plans, it is going to be very exciting. They're having stag films, and a naked girl is going to jump out of a big cake!

In days gone by, all the bride got was a lot of boring showers, but my girlfriend's want to change all that. They're planning a "bachelor girls' party" with films just like the men's," and a naked guy jumping out of a cake. I think it's a neat idea, but Jeff is against it.

I think his objections are unfair. What do you think? — ALL FOR EQUALITY

DEAR ALL FOR: Of course, Jeff's objections are unfair. Just be sure all the "girls" know what to expect in case Granny or Aunt Matilda have weak hearts — or stomachs.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married for seven years, and we are very happy. We know other cuples who have been married about the same length of time, and they aren't at all happy. In fact, they fight a lot.

The secret to our happiness is one simple rule we follow: treat each other like a human being FIRST, like a man or a woman SECOND like a husband or wife THIRD.

This has worked for us. It may for others, too. — STILL HONEYMOONERS

DEAR HONEYMOONERS: If you can make a rule that works for seven years work for seven times seven, you've got it made. Good luck.

By LESTER L. COLEMAN, M.D.

From the Mayo Clinic comes an exciting report on the successful treatment of some cancers of the lung, previously thought to be inoperable.

A group of surgeons in conjunction with Dr. Aryeh Gorenstein have been able to reach, through a bronchoscope, cancers of the lung which were difficult to localize.

They used cryosurgery, which is a freezing technique. A tiny probe, frozen to hundreds of degrees below zero, is applied directly through the bronchial tubes to the cancerous tissue.

In those cases where the procedure has been successful, the doctors say, "Patients can resume normal activity the day after surgery and be dismissed from the hospital 24 hours later."

This technique is not a substitute for a surgical approach to cancer. It is simply an additional means of treating cancers of the lung not approachable by the surgical method.

It has always been a source of wonder that beekeepers do not die or become gravely ill when repeatedly bitten by a swarm of bees.

A British and American team of allergists has found an important antibody present in large quantities in the blood of beekeepers. The antibody, called IgG, is known to play an important role in all severe allergic conditions.

In the light of these findings it is hoped that by increasing the amount of IgG antibody in all people sensitive to bee stings, the serious conseqquences of bee venom may be avoided.

Venom-sensitive people may have the solution to their problem in this newly found blood mechanism.

This work is being extended in other directions. IgE is another antibody which is being tried in patients who have severe forms of ragweed allergy.

It is certain that before long more and more modifications will be found and used for the relief and protection of the many people who are bothered by allergic disorders.

Wear Pants...and Live

BALTIMORE (AP) — Skirts and dresses may be more ladylike but pants are safer, say two Johns Hopkins University researchers who credit the switch to pants for a dramatic decline in burn deaths among girls.

From 1950 to 1974, the number of girls who died in the United States as a result of clothing fires declined 55 per cent, the researchers said, with the greatest decrease noted since the late 1960s.

Burn deaths among boys decreased 12 per cent in the 15 years, they added.

The period roughly paralleled the rise in popularity of pants among women and girls, said Stewart Young and Susan Baker of Johns Hopkins' School of Public Health. Health.

The figures they cited in a report prepared for the annual meeting of the American Public Health Association were for boys and girls under 10 years of age.

"The timing of the style change is of interest, since it preceded by several years the marked decrease in female burn deaths related to clothing," the researchers said.

Until the mid-1960s, they said, girls under 10 had death rates that were much higher than for boys, a situation unlike that for any other area of injury-related deaths.

The higher rate of burn deaths among girls, their report noted, could be attributed to loose-fitting, easily ignited dresses and nightgowns.

But as pants supplanted skirts and dresses in the femal wardrobe, the ratio reversed. By the mid-1960s boys had the higher burn-death rate, they said.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

One of the most fascinating deals I have ever seen in my life was played a few weeks ago in a team-of-four match. It illustrates most convincingly a point that has been made frequently in this column: be very wary of doubling slam contracts, for the double either (1) tells the declarer-to-be that the doubler has the outstanding high cards, thus enabling him to play the hand with greater facility, or (2) it gives the opponents the opportunity to escape to a superior contract.

North	East	South	West
2 NT	Pass	6 NT	Pass
Pass	Dbl.	7 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Six of ◇.

It is virtually impossible to understand how the two South players chose to bid six notrump over North's two notrump opening bid. Certainly with the unbalanced South hand, the quest should have been made to play the final contract in either spades or diamonds.

When South's six notrump bid reverted to each of the two East defenders, each of them elected to double. With north being the declarer, East would be on lead, and the cashing of the ace and king of hearts would defeat the contract. Actually, had the East players simply passed, East-West would have taken the first five tricks, thus setting North four tricks.

As each of the two South East's double stated that he could defeat the contract. So each of them, having been players viewed the set-up, forewarned, decided to gamble out a seven-spade contract. In so doing, they made West the opening leader.

Both of the West defenders thought long and hard before selecting their opening lead — and neither of them got his fingers on a heart. Instead, each opened a diamond.

When the dummy came into view, both South declarers breathed a deep sigh of relief. After winning the opening lead and drawing trumps, the nine and jack of hearts were discarded on dummy's ace and king of clubs.

Thus the result of the deal was a stand-off, which is what it deserved to be with poor bidding by South, followed by a nice recovery after East had tipped his hand by making a poor double.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Saturday, October 23

By SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Great emphasis now on involvement, love and money. Nothing is halfway—it is all or nothing. If you're playing games, stakes are high. If serious, be ready for more responsibility. One who appeared shy will speak up and make definite requests.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Obtain hint from Aries message. Stress on area of chart related to long-term relationship, cooperative efforts, partnership, legal affairs, marital status. Protect your rights, inventions, discoveries, investments. A fast-talking salesperson may be well-meaning but very much misinformed. Know it and be wary.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): New Moon position emphasizes employment picture, health, the sharing of interests with co-workers, associates. Change is in order — nothing is likely to remain the same. You get request and compliment. Be analytical. See facts as they exist.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Plenty of action, emotion—you express yourself in dramatic fashion. Taurus, Libra and Scorpio are part of scenario, which could include "stormy session" with one who means much to you. Impulse tends to dominate logic. Imprint your own meaning, style.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You do some soul-searching. Your abode may be "invaded." You discover what — and who — means most to your well-being. Choose security over intrigue. This will take deep thinking, consideration and attunement to "inner voice."

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You're being called in numerous directions. Key is to organize, to accept responsibility, to separate the real from illusion. Capricorn, Cancer persons could figure prominently. Postpone short journey, if practical. Relatives may be in mood to do battle!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Friends are intense about beliefs — don't argue with fanatics. Finish project without involving individual who is frustrated, envious. Money dispute is temporary — know it and act as if you are aware of it. Review financial commitments.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Lunar emphasis on initiative, independence, new starts, awareness, willingness to stand tall for principles. Leo, Aquarius figure prominently. Much of what was standard operating procedure is subject to sudden change.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Intuition, learning process, teaching—these figure prominently. Much occurs behind the scenes, but shouting is loud and anything but discreet. Cancer, Leo and Sagittarius are part of your personal scenario.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 - Jan. 19): Highlight versatility. One who presses you for answers could be playing cat-and-mouse game. Know it and protect self in emotional clinches. Long-forgotten fantasies, wishes are activated. Expand horizons without scattering forces. Element of luck or timing rides with you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Position is strong but controversial. Superiors back you have some "salty" comments. Get facts on paper. Prepare outline of position. Those who seem to be in command may actually be replaced. Be prepared.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Communications could be garbled, subject to change—long-range plans may be revised, reviewed, reversed. Travel, publishing, ability to retain theme — this portion of Solar horoscope is spotlighted. Gemini figures prominently.

IF OCTOBER 23rd IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are intense, attractive, obstinate, creative. You also are analytical, fond of getting ideas out to the public. Gemini, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. Travel and greater emotional satisfaction indicated for you in December. Horizons are enlarged next year — you're due for more happiness than has been your lot in the past nine years.

Today we have a regular Magic Square. That's a sequence of consecutive positive numbers, arranged in solid square formation so that each column, each row, and each main diagonal adds up to the same magic total.

In our square that magic total is just double the square of the difference between the greatest and smallest numbers in the sequence.

What must it be?

GARDENING

Move Chance Seedlings Quickly

A habit among gardeners is to call a plant "wild" when it appears in the garden without having been planted there by the owner. To some, the word "wild" has the meaning "having its origin in a certain region," but usually the wild plants occurring in a garden are not in this "native" or "wild" category. Nor are they "naturalized" plants from another region.

When we see some of these so-called "wild" plants they turn out to be holly seedlings, cherry seedlings, ivies, toneasters or even Daphne laureola, the Spurge-laurel. None of these fit into the native or the wild cateogry.

Newcomer gardeners are especially confused when these appear as seedlings, and wonder if they "grow wild here."

The answer is that all these seedlings are from plants that bear fruits when cultivated. The fruits are food for birds who move around in several miles of territory, dropping the seeds of the fruits as the pulp is digested.

Hawthorn seedlings are prolific in many city and suburban gardens, for named forms of the pink and white varieties have been grown for years as boulevard trees on municipal streets and in most of the older gardens.

In woodland near residential areas we come across many of the plants mentioned in the preceding paragraphs because birds congregate there for nesting and also in the fall to feed on fruits of the true native plants, most of which ripen later than those on cultivated plants.

The chief concern of gardeners is whether to leave the chance seedlings where they are, and if not, when o move them.

First the decision must be made as to whether the new plant is really wanted in the garden. Being a seedling it may not resemble the parent tree or shrub so that it is a "chance" seedling indeed, there is a chance that it will have none of the desirable qualities to make it a good garden plant.

Often these seedlings sprout in crevices of rocks, along fenced rows, close to house walls, at the foot of established trees, wherever birds perch in large numbers. Of these places only one is suitable for a tree or shrub and that is by a fence. Even there it may become a nuisance, so think well. Remove the young plant as soon as it is discovered and identified.

Some gardeners find holly seedlings and at once imagine the beauty of well berried trees in winter, but it is a chance in a thousand to get a holly seedling that will produce berries.

When a decision is made to keep a chance seedling, move it while only a few inches high, or as soon as discovered. The roots will then be small enough to move and replant without too much damage. Later the deep anchor roots are difficult to reach, and surface roots have spread beneath other plants or beneath concrete paths, around rocks in a rock garden or under a fence into a neighbor's garden.

Whenever chance seedlings of trees and shrubs appear in the garden, it is wise to deal with them at once, either to discard, or to transplant while still small.

I'D LOVE TO GO
SOUTH WITH YOU . . .

I'm looking for a nice couple to take me South with them. Travelaire mini-motorhome is my name. I'm single (right now) and I'm 23' long. I'm a Canadian gal who's really built. I can show a couple a real hot time in return for taking me South. I've got my own living room and big bathroom with tub. I'm real comfortable to live with. I won't be any trouble along the way, plus once we're there I'll let you use all my equipment, which I might add is pretty nice. I've got a beautiful big sofa bed for sitting or whatever and I've a nice set of Captains chairs you'll love to relax in. A trim little eye-level oven and cozy kitchen plus when you want to put your hands on our cans they are easy to reach. I've got so much more to offer that if you see me you'll really want me. P.S. I'm beautiful too. I'll be waiting for you at Anyone can appreciate the obvious features in this 2,300 sq. ft. one level custom home. Things like the materials used for finishing inside, double enclosed garage, his and hers bathrooms, fireplaces in den and family rooms, the list goes on and on. However, what makes this property such an excellent buy is the features you may not see such as 200 amp electric service, two separate 40-gallon hot water tanks so you don't have to wait for hot water, tar and gravel roof, 4 inch and 6 inch insulation and all thermopane windows.

Combine all this on .43 acre lot with underground services and you've got the best dollar value in this area for $85,000. Why not see for yourself and then decide?

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad. Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for your daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Six-Month Dig for $100M Gems Halts

NEW DELHI, India (UPI) — The Great Jaipur Treasure Hunt, a search for maharajahs' gold and jewels worth millions or even billions of dollars, has ended in failure as quietly as it began, according to reports reaching New Delhi.

The Statesman, the second newspaper in recent days to report an end to the digging at Jaigarh Fort in Jaipur, reported today the search was "stopped on Sept. 30 and the army personnel were given a farewell on Oct. 9."

The treasure hunt had all the ingredients of a mystery thriller — an old map with codes and scripts to be deciphered, fierce tribal descendants of those who originally guarded the treasure, and reports of pile upon pile of glittering gold and jewels and numerous underground tunnels.

Fittingly enough, it was the income tax officials who began the search, upon being presented with a map from a member of the Mina Tribe, whose members had guarded the treasure at Jaigarh Fort.

According to tradition, the guards would allow the Maharajah of Jaipur, now capital of Rajasthan State, about 120 miles southwest of New Delhi, to enter the underground treasure room once in his lifetime.

The ruler would be blindfolded and could take away only one object. income tax officials said the ruler had a high chance of striking it rich, because they believed the treasure still contained more than $30 million worth of jewelry, including a 90-carat emerald and rubies the size of pigeons' eggs.

They estimated the likely value of the underground hoard at $100 million but others said with current market rates the amount would more likely be $60 billion.

Archeologists, geologists, army police and members of the former royal family of Jaipur got involved in the search. Metal detectors and other equipment were brought to the site and laborers were kept within the fort at all times to maintain secrecy.

Digging went on for six months and it was assumed the gold and jewels would be found buried at least 100 feet underground, perhaps twice that deep. Tunnels and underground water storage tanks were found, but no gold or jewels.

Police Raid School, Grab Teachers, Pupils

Times News Services

JOHANNESBURG — Riot police raided a high school in Soweto today and arrested all students and teachers in the building

Col. J. Visser, head of the criminal investigation division in Soweto, a centre of black unrest in white-ruled South Africa, refused to comment on the raid.

The number of persons detained was not deisclosed, but witnesses said police used four large vans to carry away those arrested.

When police arrived at the school, a number of students rushed into the classrooms and warned their teachers and other students, the black newspaper The World reported.

The paper said the raiding party included black and white police, some in uniform and others wearing battle fatiges.

A police spokesman described the patrols as "purely precautionary" and said the possibility of trouble is slight.

Police have been on alert in the central business district of Johannesburg, the country's commercial capital, since downtown demonstrations by black youths in September.

Earlier in the day, black youths stoned vehicles and set fire to a school and a black policeman's home in a new round of scattered violence hitting segregated townships outside Johannesburg and Pretoria.

Maj. Gen. David Kriel said police fired four warning shots Thursday to scatter a group of 20 black youths who stoned their vehicle in Naledi, a suburb of Soweto.

Police in Cape Town, 1,000 miles south of Johannesburg, said the black driver of a bread delivery truck was injured when a group of youths stoned his vehicle and set fire to it with a gasoline bomb in the black suburb of Gugulethu.

Meanwhile, in Salisbury, the government said today it will evict 17,000 black squatters from a shantytown outside the Rhodesian capital where squalid conditions make the threat of a cholera outbreak "very real.'"

Government sources said the decision was taken despite the fear that a mass eviction could cause violent — and embarrassing — incidents during the Geneva conference on Rhodesia's political future.

14-Year-Old Robs, Rapes And Shoots

LOS ANGELES (UPI) A 14-year-old boy kidnapped two men and a woman, robbed them, raped the woman twice, and shot one of the men in front of a police station.

The youth, whose identity could not be made public because of his age, was being held on a charge of attempted murder, police said Thursday.

Police said the boy approached the three adults in a shopping center parking lot and demanded money. When they refused, he drew a pistol and shot one of the men in the face.

Although the parking lot faces the Foothill Division Police Station, officers did not hear the shot.

The boy climbed into the car and forced the three to drive him to Sylmar, authorities said, where he took the men's money and ordered them out of the car, driving off with the woman.

After stopping twice to rape the woman, he drove her back to the parking lot by the police station, where officers arrested him, police said.

Fowl Supper Victims Buried

SEDLEY, Sask. (CP) — Funeral service was held Thursday for two men slain in the aftermath of an armed robbery here Sunday.

Joseph Wendel Helfrick, 54 and Edward Leier, 50, were buried side by side in the cemetery on the eastern edge of the community of 280, located about 30 miles southeast of Regina.

More than 800 persons, some from as far away as Quebec and British Columbia, attended the service at Our Lady of Grace Roman Catholic Church, the site of the robbery four days before.

The victims had been shot to death after chasing two men, following a robbery of $1,200 at the church's annual fowl supper.

A substantial portion of the over-flow crowd at the church observed the mass, eulogy and communion on two closed-circuit televison sets in the basement of the church where Sunday's supper had been held.

Still others waited outside on the street.

In his eulogy, Rev. Francis Marcotte, ex-parish priest, said Helfrick and Leier, both lifetime residents of Sedley, gave generously of their time for both the church and the community.

Ultimately, the men gave up their lives for both, he said.

"Some have said that life will never be the same in Sedley because of the incident, but life will be better for Joseph and Edward having lived here," Marcotte said

He asked those in attendance to pray for the redemption of the slayers of the two community leaders.

Two Regina men, Robert George Gulash, 34, and David Glenn Hares, 22, have been arrested on charges of armed robbery and two counts of murder in connection with the Sedley incident.

Janet Elaine Vance, 27, also of Regina, is in custody having been charged with armed robbery.

INMATE JOB PLAN SLAMMED

EDMONTON (CP) — The provincial government's proposed bill to force all medically fit prisoners to work is terrible and not very humane, the Alberta Federation of Labor said Thursday.

"It's not very humane ... perhaps they should put Farran (Solicitor-General Roy Farran) in there," AFL executive-secretary Eugene Mitchell said.

'Gas Leak' Just Raised a Stink

EDMONTON (CP) — A harmless odorent, used to give natural gas its smell, was responsible for a leak scare which cleared several downtown offices Thursday, says a Northwestern Utilities spokesman.

Phil Hindmarch said the company believes the substance, called mercaptan, escaped when a hose broke at a gas plant south of the city.

"The odorent is added to the gas so that any leaks can be detected," said Hindmarch. "It is harmless but it smells like rotten eggs."

Hundreds of office workers were evacuated from buildings in the Churchill Square area after staff complained of gas odors and sounded fire alarms.

Civil servants and staff from Century Place streamed out of the building after complaining of a strong gas smell around 11 a.m. Proceedings in the provincial courthouse were suspended and staff at the centennial library, police headquarters and city hall were evacuated as fire trucks and firemen converged on the scene to search for the source of the leak.

Gas company crews were unable to locate a gas leak anywhere in the downtown offices.

"The mercaptan was being added to gas at a plant south of the city when a hose broke," said Hindmarch. "We believe this was the source of the smell."

Deputy Chief Jack Adams said the fire department received complaints and added the gas odors may have been related to similar complaints from the south side earlier Thursday.

REGINA (CP) — Marc Lalonde, federal minister of health and welfare, will be urged by the Saskatchewan Medical Association to use cigarette package advertising to warn pregnant women of the dangers of smoking.

The association's representative assembly, meeting this week in Regina, agreed to the action after it was proposed by Dr. Raymond Denson, of the Saskatchewan Interagency Council on Smoking and Health.

Dr. Denson said studies have shown children of mothers who smoke are often permanently physically and mentally impaired.

Errant Hubby Program In City

By LIZ HUGHES

Times Staff

VANCOUVER — A pilot project designed to collect alimony for welfare recipients from errant spouses will operate in Victoria in November and December, Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm said Thursday.

"We, as the state, have to seek him out, sock it to him, and make him pay," Vander Zalm told the women's auxiliary to the Social Credit Party of B.C. during the party's annual convention in Vancouver.

The alimony-collecting program is contained in legislation introduced during the last session and the minister said Thursday the program will be tried out on a trial basis in Victoria for two months before it is introduced on a province-wide scale.

Any deserted spouse applying for welfare in the Victoria area who is entitled to, but not receiving, alimony or support payment will come under the new system.

The department of human resources will attempt to collect the money owing to the welfare recipient rather than the persons themselves having to go through the courts to get the money.

The purpose of the pilot project is to determine how much staff and money will be needed to operate the program. The Victoria project will operate with existing staff and will not cost any extra money, the minister said.

When the department tracks down a spouse who has not kept up support payments it will be up to the courts to decide how the money should be paid, but Vander Zalm suggested a person's wages could be garnisheed or a claim made against his assets.

New Hua Position Confirmed

TOKYO (AP) — China's official news agency gave the first official confirmation today of the appintment of Premier Hua Kuo-feng to succeed Mao Tse-tung as chairman of the Chinese Communist party and of the purge of Mao's widow and three other leaders of the party's radical wing.

Reporting on the huge demonstration in Peking Thursday against Chiang Ching, Mao's widow, and her three radical allies on the party Politburo, the Hsinhua agency said:

"The party central committee headed by Chairman Hua Kuo-feng adopted resolute and decisive measures to crush the counter-revolutionary conspiratorial clique and liquidated a bane inside the party."

The use of the word "liquidated" in the Hsinhua report was not considered an indication that the four had been executed. No political executions are known to have taken place in China in recent years, not even during the stormiest days of the radicals' Curtural Revolution.

Japanese correspondents in Peking reported that the demonstrations continued today for the second day, with military personnel, workers and students marching and beating drums and gongs.

Although wall posters in Peking first reported the promotion of the 57-year-old premier on Oct. 9, Hsinhua's report today was the first by an official organ to refer to him as party chairman.

Pet Makes Monkey Out of Deliveryman

DELTA (CP) — A 24-year-old truck driver picked up more than he could handle when making deliveries near Vancouver on Thursday.

Bill Longton had parked his department store truck and was checking parcel labels when his vehicle was commandeered by an escaped pet monkey.

"The right-hand door was open and in jumps this hairy thing wearing a jean jacket and it starts swinging around the bars in the back of the truck," he said. "It gave me a bit of a scare."

Longton jumped out of the truck and slammed both doors shut. Some bystanders offered to call the police and someone did contact them. But apparently police thought it was a hoax and didn't respond until a second call was made about half an hour later.

Longton watched in despair as the monkey ate his pipe tobacco and helped himself to his lunch. When he got bored with that he started opening parcels.

He then began tuning the radio to a station he liked better and checking the delivery books.

"He smashed my record books," Longton said. "It took me about an hour just to get them in order again. It was just havoc."

Finally police arrived and found the monkey's owner, Terry Roosvold.

"He was a really nice guy," Longton said. "He also had a very friendly pet raccoon but my problems weren't over because the monkey had swallowed my truck keys.

"I was told it was a South American short-tailed monkey that has some sort of pouch and the owner managed to get the keys out for me."

Rosvold also recovered the tuning knob from the monkey's mouth.

Rosvold said Bill is a two-year-old South American stub-tailed monkey. He had been tied with a rope lead to a willow tree after a walk when he got away, he said.

Bill has never escaped before but it didn't surprise Rosvold.

"He's smart as hell. He can open a door, he can untie a simple knot — he doesn't miss a thing."

MACHINE GUN GUARDS FOR NUCLEAR PLANT

RICHLAND, Wash. (AP) — The Hanford nuclear reservation is training a 32-member special guard unit armed with machine guns and supplied with two armored personnel carriers, the U.S. government said Thursday.

The government and a contractor which supplies 160 patrolmen for the 570-square mile desert reservation said the weaponry would provide additional security.

Asked if Hanford is increasing security because it expects attacks by terrorists, James Kennedy, commander of the guard force provided by Atlantic Richfield Hanford Co., said "not really . . . we are continually upgrading our safeguards at the project."

"We are aware of the fact there are problems in the nation with terrorist groups."

One reason for security guards at Hanford is to protect the N reactor, which produces plutonium for atomic weapons.

Storm Smashes Tall Ship

HALIFAX (CP) — The 30-year-old barquentine Erawan, one of the tall ships seen in New York harbor July 4, has been smashed to pieces on rocks in the Canso Strait.

The transport ministry said today only a small part of the hull of the 150-foot, three-masted vessel was visible after winds of up to 96 kilometres swept the area Thursday.

"She's gone," a transport ministry public relations officer said here. The vessel was built in Sweden in 1947 as a Baltic trader, one of the last wooden ships designed for commercial use.

Body Parts Taken

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Two planes collided over a residential neighborhood Thursday, scattering burning wreckage and pieces of the two pilots over a wide area, including an elementary school.

Despite efforts by police, firemen and federal aviation inspectors, souvenir hunters stole some of the body parts along with pieces of the planes needed by investigators, police said.

"They were carrying off everything from airplane parts to actual pieces of bodies," a Culver City police office was quoted as telling the Los Angeles Times.

"You couldn't believe it. They must have been out of their minds."

Tough Stand Taken By City on Police

By PAUL MOSS

Times Staff

Mayor Mike Young today warned the city will not tolerate "unlawful" job action by the Victoria Policemen's Union as a means of forcing contract settlement.

Following a 75-minute meeting this morning with other members of the Victoria police board and Deputy Police Chief Les Mottershead, Young said the city cannot tolerate or condone tactics like Thursday's sick book-off by all 21 members of the night shift.

And he warned that a precondition to continued negotiations must be a return to normal staffing.

Young said he had arranged a meeting for later today with the police union, at which he hoped to present certain "possible and potential solutions to the problem."

After the nightshift personnel booked off sick Thursday, 16 day-shift officers worked overtime and most members of the late-night shift (starting at 11:30 p.m.) reported for duty three hours early to help replace the missing officers. (The night shift starts at 3:30 p.m.)

This morning, however, all members of the 7:30 a.m. shift reported for duty as usual. Mottershead said he had no idea what the staff situation would be later in the day.

A member of the union estimated if the necessity of overtime shifts continues, it will cost the city $1,200 a shift.

Young agreed the action was costly: "When you run the kitty dry, there is no way you can easily accept a settlement which we had basically agreed upon, on the assumption that we had the funds to pay for it."

Young also made it clear that any extra expense forced by job action will make it that much more difficult to reach a settlement.

Spokesmen for both sides said earlier there was agreement on virtually all aspects of the 1976 contract, but the stumbling block is the question of retroactive payment in the agreed eight per cent increase.

The union is insisting on immediate retroactive pay, but the police board says the contract must receive the approval of the Anti-Inflation Board.

Young told reporters this

Canada 'On Verge of Break-Up'

MONTREAL (CP) — Bryce Mackasey attacked Quebec separatism as well as the province's Official Language Act Thursday night.

Addressing a largely English-speaking audience in west-end Dorval, the former federal cabinet minister said that Canada is on the verge of breaking up.

He blamed most of the "fear, frustration and hostility" experienced by Quebec's minorities and residents of other provinces on the province's language act.

Tunnel Under Suez

LONDON (WP) — Egypt is about to build a tunnel under the Suez Canal which would pose a major threat to Israel, the Daily Mail reported today. The paper's military correspondent said Egypt had a $48 million contract with two British firms that included secret clauses covering the boring of a tunnel big enough to let tanks cross rapidly under the waterway.

FOOT PASSENGERS TO GET BREAK

Any official announcement will have to come from the new B.C. Ferries Corporation, which takes over ferries operation Jan. 1. But Davis said the government has already studied the impact of dropping fares for foot passengers in off-peak periods.

he one-way fare now is $4 between Swartz Bay and Tsawwassen and Nanaimo's Departure Bay and Horseshoe Bay, doubled by the government in June.

Davis said the off-peak periods could include Monday through Thursday during winter and Saturday noon to Sunday noon. Full fares would apply throughout summer and on all holidays and long weekends.

Did Spray Cause Defects?

That summer Mrs. Renaud conceived her first child Sarah, who was born in May the following year with a spinal defect. A second daughter, Tamie, was born with the same defect in February, 1975.

Although she can't prove it, Mrs. Renaud believes that she, along with other women on the island who miscarried that year, was a victim of a chemical assault.

$7B Fiddle by Ottawa, Auditor-General Charges

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has overstated its financial standing by about $7 billion through a series of questionable accounting practices which include irrecoverable loans to Crown corporations and foreign states, Auditor-General J. J. Macdonell says.

In a critical assessment of federal book-keeping, Macdonell said the government is misrepresenting its assets by counting as revenue a wide range of costly programs and loans that were supposed to be—but are not self-financing or repayable.

He specifically mentioned more than $2 billion in payments to the unemployment insurance fund, numerous loans to Canadian National, the National Harbors Board, the St. Lawrence Seaway Authority and other Crown corporations and more than $1.2 billion in payments to foreign countries.

He said government accounting practices are undermining Parliament's control over the public purse and distorting the government's real financial position.

Macdonell, Parliament's watchdog over government spending, took the unusual step of including his criticisms in the first volume of the public accounts, the annual summary of federal income and spending which was tabled in the Commons earlier this week. Two succeeding volumes of the public accounts to be released next week will give details of revenue and spending for individual government departments and Crown corporations for the fiscal year ended last March 31.

The auditor-general routinely criticizes government financial bungling in his annual report to Parliament expected later this fall. This year he has included portions of his annual report in the public accounts.

Macdonell listed $7.1 billion in loans and repayable advances to special funds which, he said, will either be written off as bad debts or covered through appropriations by Parliament. This is partially offset by $108 million sitting in special government accounts as liabilities which should be returned to the central revenue fund and listed as assets.

151 ARRESTED IN DRUG RAID

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police said Thursday that 151 persons have been charged with 191 counts of trafficking in narcotics in the largest drug roundup in the Vancouver area.

A police spokesman said that by late Thursday about 55 suspects had been apprehended and the arrests were continuing.

The charges related to trafficking in heroin, cocaine, speed, mescaline, marijuana and hashish.

Law, Order and the WA Rally Socred Women

Times Staff

VANCOUVER — The women's auxiliary to the B.C. Social Credit Party survived a threat to its very existence Thursday and will be back to fight the battle for law and order again next year.

The threat to the auxiliary came during the party's annual convention in Vancouver in the form of a motion from Anita Tozer, sister of Premier Bill Bennett.

Mrs. Tozer, calling the auxiliary "chauvinistic" and "redundant," attempted to disband the organization and have it join with the party as a whole in the cause of unity.

But the 112 voting delegates to the auxiliary convention quickly warded off the suggestion by defeating the motion overwhelmingly.

"Behind every good man, there's a good woman," one delegate said during the debate.

Mrs. Tozer was asked later if her motion represented a move by the powers that be in the party, including her brother, to get rid of the auxiliary which at times causes the party some embarrassment. But she said the motion came from the Kelowna branch of the auxiliary and was not discussed with her brother.

The organization, known simply as the "W.A" to those who belong, dealt mainly with law and order resolutions such as banning "vulgar and obscene" sex education books and with the sterilization of rapists.

The rape question generated some heated debate and the chairman several times had to warn the delegates that rape is not a laughing matter.

The resolution called for the sterilization of all proven rapists and was eventually referred back to the Dawson Creek W. A. for further research.

One delegate attempted to move an amendment to the motion which called for the castration of rapists but another said the idea was ridiculous because "if he can't rape he might kill."

The debate veered off on several tangents and one woman suggested that instead of "circumcision or whatever it is we're talking about," that rapists be put away for good.

The organization's newsletter is called the "W.A. Communique" and there was a motion to change the name to

LEGISLATIVE LIGHTS were dim as heavy fog descended on the city Thursday night, creating this ghostly effect. One evening flight out of Victoria International Airport was cancelled to Vancouver and flights today were delayed up to 90 minutes. Ferries were running on schedule at Swartz Bay. More overnight fog has been forecast for tonight. (John McKay photo)

Fog Blanket To Vanish By Sunday

Heavy fog which has caused transportation problems for the last two days should lift by Sunday.

Weather officials said today they expected a new air pressure system to move in from the Pacific Sunday, allowing the "stagnant air mass" to drift off.

Until then, air travellers between Victoria and Vancouver will continue to experience delays and cancellations.

One Air Canada flight from Victoria was cancelled Thursday night as was a flight coming in the other direction. Some Pacific Western Airlines flights from Victoria were delayed as they had to land at Abbotsford.

Airline spokesmen said there were no concellations today but some delays of up to 90 minutes.

An official at Victoria International Airport said planes were having trouble getting in and out of Victoria. The problem was there was nowhere to go as Vancouver airport was closed for a time.

A spokesman for B.C. Ferries said the fog is not affecting ferry schedules and police said there were no problems on the highways in the Victoria area.

A weather official said there would be no appreciable change in the foggy conditions today or Sunday.

He said the condition is known as an inversion and is caused by warm air above trapping cooler air. Until the pressure system changes and an air current blows the warm air away, the condition will remain.

CRASH IGNITES DISASTER CHAIN

Saanich firemen said the car slammed into a telephone pole. The impact jarred loose a guy wire which struck a high tension power line which tangled with a power line into a house at 1871 Grandview.

A fire official said the occupants of the house, Mr. and Mrs. Demson Stewart, smelled smoke and reported the fire at 12:23 a.m.

Firemen said structural damage was minimal but estimated it would cost several hundred dollars to repair the electrical circuitry in the switch box.

The car left the scene immediately after the accident and has not been located.

Where else, for instance could you get a bacon-and-eggs breakfasr for 32 cens? Or a prime roast dinner for 89 cents?

Nowhere. At least not in this century. And that's the point.

For one gltrious day the Empress is returning to its 19-century price list. It's all part of the Canadian Pacific hotel chain's celebrations this week of its 90th anniversary.

But, says Empress spokesman Dorothy Cook, the 1886 prices are effective for only the one day, and don't apply to liquor, coffee or anything else that isn't on the special menu.

"Anybody who did this for a week would be broke," she said.

Cliff Survey Urged For Dallas Erosion

BLOOD DRIVE FALLS BEHIND

There were 376 donors at the blood clinic in the Hillside Mall Thursday but the Red Cross campaign in Greater Victoria continues to slip behind its objective.

Spokesman Gerry Savage said Thursday's target had been 433 but he described results as "quite good."

After four days in the two-week blood drive to attract 2,500 donors, numbers of donors stands at 911 while the objective to date is 1,068.

Today's clinic was at Work Point Barracks. Monday the clinic is in the Georgian lounge of The Empress from 2:30 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

The first step toward halting the erosion of the Dallas Road cliffs, which is eating away about 14 inches of shoreline a year, was taken Thursday by Victoria's public works committee.

Aldermen recommended that a shoreline geological survey be conducted by Thurber Consultants Ltd., to assess the problem and the required solutions.

The study will cost a maximum of $10,000, and city engineer John Sansom hazarded a "rough guess" that the actual work needed to halt the erosion process could cost between $50,000 and $100,000.

The survey was not recommended without some quibbles from committee members.

Ald. Ron McKenzie disliked the proposal to commission the study without first inviting tenders from interested bidders, but was told by Sansom that Thurber Consultants is the only firm of geotechnical engineers in this area.

Ald. Bill Tindall complained that authorizing the survey without knowing the eventual cost of the shoreline stabilization work was a case of "buying a pig in a poke."

Sansom replied that there wouldn't be any need for a study if such facts were already available.

He said the main area of concern over erosion — which is caused by a combination of heavy wave action undermining the cliffs and inadequate drainage — the stretch between Clover Point and Douglas Street.

Jetfoil To End Nov. 1

Georgian Gulf Cruises has announced jetfoil service between Victoria and Seattle will end Nov. 1, following a 46-day trial period.

Company President James Byrn said Thursday that after that date the jetfoil is going to Europe on a promotion trip.

He said response to the service, which began Sept. 15, has been excellent with the vessel operating at about 90 per cent capacity.

Byrn said he will review the results of the trial run and then make a decision on whether to purchase a similar jetfoil for $7.5 million and operate on the Seattle-Victoria run next summer.

Vancouver-based Georgian Gulf Cruises has been running the jetfoil in co-operation with Boeing Co. of Seattle and the B.C. Steamship Co.

Glazier Seeks Second Term On City Council

Ald. Murray Glazier said today he will seek a second term on Victoria city council in the Nov. 20 civic electon.

He is the second incumbent to announce his re-election ambitions. Also running again is Ald. Bob Ellis, but five-year council veteran Ald. Alf Hood said last week he will not be in the contest.

The fourth incumbent, Ald. John Hayes, has yet to indicate his intentions.

Glazier is chairman of the housing and neighborhood improvement committee on council and one of his major tasks has been the implementation of N.I.P. projects in James Bay and Victoria West.

He is also a director on the Capital Regional Board, where he is chairman of the land banking and housing committee and a member of public works. He plans to run again for a board seat.

Bill McElroy, 30, a research officer for the provincial department of housing, also announced today he will be a candidate in the November election.

A director of the Fairfield Community Association, McElroy was runner-up in the February byelection for the seat of MLA Sam Bawlf.

New Prosecutor In Forces Case

A new prosecuting officer was named Thursday to replace Capt. James J. Priddle who collapsed during the court martial of M-Cpl. Adolph Plewa, 46, Tuesday.

A Canadian forces spokesman said Priddle was under treatment for exhaustion.

Maj. William Reed, who was prosecutor in the court martial of Cpl. Robert Ganner, will take Priddle's place when the trial resumes at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday in the chief petty officer's mess.

Prosecutor in the fourth court martial, in which pleas have not yet been taken, is Cmdr. Doug Sherlock, deputy judge advocate for Pacific command. The accused in this case is a former serviceman, ex-M-Cpl. Craig Campbell, 30, who remains subject to service discipline for alleged offences while he was a serving member of the forces.

Campbell was adjourned to 8:30 a.m. Wednesday to plead to three charges — theft, receiving monies improperly and conspiracy to steal.

Plewa has pleaded not guilty to three similar charges. Both men were former mess managers at Club 44.

Ganner, former mess president, was found guilty of a series of charges, discharged and sentenced to four years in jail.

The second man tried, Cpl. Michael J. Dalrymple, was found guilty of a lesser number of offences while he was vice-president of the mess and was sentenced to a year in jail and discharged.

Stolen Bell: The Silence Is Deafening

The silence is beginning to deafen the Royal Roads command.

Earlier this week, someone stole a ship's bell from the Military College. Since then, the bell hasn't tolled and the college doesn't know what toll has to be paid to get the bell back.

The crime was purportedly perpetrated to hold college cadets responsible for raising more money for the United Way campaign by having them march in Saturday's walkathon.

But an appeal went out from the college vice-command to suggest a different ransom be paid because it is mid-term break at the college and few of the students will be around.

The college is taking everything in good faith, but would appreciate a call at 388-1495. (Ask for Capt. John MacDonald, base information officer.)

MacDonald said he would hold the call in strictest confidence, but would require that the caller identify himself. He also would have to see the bell before the ransom was negotiated.

New School Board Head?

At least two new faces on the Greater Victoria school board are guaranteed following the Nov. 20 elections, and there could be a third.

Later in the week Roy Temple also announced he will not run.

And insiders speculate board chairman Bill Ross will also step down. He has been swamped with work since he took over as headmaster of Brentwood College in Mill Bay earlier this year.

From the very beginning he has said he would have to carefully consider whether to run again or not.

Only board vice-chairman Susan Brice ("Yes, I'm running") and trustee Dr. Mark Fisher ("I'm sufficiently insane to run again") definitely will be on the ballot out of the five incumbents whose terms expire at the end of this year.

Three Victoria businessmen have announced they are willing to take up the slack. Bud Smith, Peter Yorke and John Young have all announced their candidacy for school trustee.

In announcng her decision not to run, Mrs. Baird apologized to the board for leaving so soon. She had been on the board for only one term.

But she said that being a trustee and raising five children between the ages of 10 and 14 "is just not compatible."

Temple was a little less enamored with being a trustee.

"I haven't been able to make the contribution I thought I could," the retired school principal said. "Therefore, there hasn't been the satisfaction I expected."

He said he considered the board meetings boring and largely a waste of time, dragging on and on, accomplishing little.

The committee work was interesting and productive, he said, but not the board work.

He was opposed to the closing of Lampson School and after he raised his objection, was removed from the one committee he enjoyed — Camosun College council. He said Ross accused him of "fiscal irresponsibility," in removing him.

New York

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market declined again Friday amid news signs of sluggishness in the economy.

Analysts noted disappointment with the market's downturn Thursday despite the news of the smallest rise in the consumer price index in five months.

The news provided further evidence of a recent slackening in the pace of the recovery from the recession.

Gardner-Denver, also active, slumped 1¾ to $18½. The company, which produces industrial equipment, reported sharply lower third quarter earnings.

Abitibi Paper was off ⅜ at $10½, Imperial Oil A ⅜ at $19½, Bank of Montreal ⅛ at $15⅛ and Alcan ⅜ at $24⅛. Interprovincial Pipe Line A was up ¼ at $14⅛.

No Answer For Petrosar

CORUNNA, Ont. (CP) — Petrosar Ltd. officials did not receive an answer to their application to buy western oil when they met with the Alberta Petroleum Marketing Commission in Edmonton, Angus Fraser, the company's public relations manager, says.

Premier Peter Lougheed told the Alberta legislature last week that Petrosar will not be approved as a buyer.

Fraser said the company believes the announcement does not prevent Petrosar from obtaining supplies from a third party through purchasers already approved by the marketing commission.

Collectibles

By JOHN HEARN

Lea Chandler of Ottawa asks if I have any do's and don'ts for people who are thinking about setting up in the antiques business.

I checked with a few dealer friends and their unanimous reply was 'don't do it'. According to them, the rising tide of competition has already ruined what was once a profitable trade.

The fact is that competition is supposed to lower prices under our system—and I do not observe my friends putting up the shutters.

1. The amount of sheer knowledge you are going to need is comparable with that of a brain surgeon—and you won't make as much money! Virtually everything manufactured before World War Two is now finding its way into antiques shops and learning all about everything is a formidable task. Haunt antique stores and auction sales, ask questions and keep asking questions. Subscribe to all the journals, read all the books (there are thousands of them) take courses wherever they are offered by community colleges. Decide what your own specialty is going to be and build around that.

2. You will need a great deal of money. There are no antiques supply houses and no credit. You will have to pay cash for all your supplies and whatever equity you may build will be tied up in stock for as far ahead as you can imagine.

3. You must come to grips with the whole problem of supplies. Selling antiques is not difficult; acquiring them is. The day when gullible countryfolk could be persuaded to part up with their 'junk' for a song is long past. There is no part of the country which has not been thoroughly combed and few people who are not alert to the fact that their 'junk' is worth money. There is no way in which you (and your wife or whatever unpaid assistant you have in mind) can both run the store and do the amount of buying necessary to keep going. You need pickers—folk whose regular business takes them around the country and gives them the opportunity to act as buying agents on the side. They need their profit, you need yours—and the end price must still be competitive. Are you sure you know how to obtain all that merchandise? Are you tough-minded enough to negotiate such deals with widows and pensioners who need the money? Are you prepared to forget about holidays or getting rich? Are you SURE you would not do better in brain surgery?

GLOWS IN THE END

Female Humorists Benefit From Feminist Movement

By VERNON SCOTT

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Lily Tomlin says one of the most rewarding manifestations of the feminist movement is the liberation of female humorists.

It's difficult to remember when so many comediennes have had it so good. Along with Lily such other funny ladies as Joan Rivers, Cher, Totie Fields, Phyllis Diller and Carol Burnett are going strong.

Television's sitcom field is awash with comedy actresses — Mary Tyler Moore, Bea Arthur, Valerie Harper, Jean Stapleton, Cloris Leachman, Nancy Walker and a half dozen others.

More often than not men are the butt of their jokes. Even more importantly, comediennes, are free to mock their own sex.

"The liberation movement absolutely is responsible for opening up television and nightclubs to women comics," Tomlin said. "There's no doubt about it in my mind.

"We still have to stick to a kind of acceptable format. But audience acceptance is greater than it's ever been.

"Most comediennes have a humanistic approach to humor. We do more character studies. I know I do.

Lily employs many of the characters she introduced on the old "Rowan and Martin Laugh-In" series — the tasteful lady, Edith Ann, Suzie Sorority, Ernestine the telephone operator and others.

She thinks of Laugh-In as having spawned several comediennes. The show certainly brought her to national attention. It also made stars of Goldie Hawn, Ruth Buzzi and Jo Anne Worley.

"I never make my characters black and white," she said. "I try to make them sympathetic.

"I poke fun at feminine stereotypes without satirizing them. Both men and women in the audience respond equally to the characters.

CTV TO FEATURE TOLLER CRANSTON

The CTV Television Network will present the World Premiere of Toller on Saturday, October 23, at 7 p.m., a one-hour documentary which portrays the lifestyle of the controversial athlete and artist Toller Cranston.

Cranston is to the world of figure skating what Nijinski was to dance. He's been envied, emulated, criticised and praised and through it all has gone on breaking new barriers and setting new limits.

Cranston is one of Canada's most publicized athletes. He's a figure skater, an athlete, a painter and a dedicated professional. In this one hour special Toller is highlighted as he has never been before, according to CTV.

Following him from his cluttered painting studio to the daily rigours of several hours of practice under the critical eyes of his coaches as he prepares for the World Figure Skating Championships, Toller is seen in competitive performance through his own eyes, those of his peers, the judges and the spectators offering his own comments on the future directions of free skating.

As the film progresses, the comparisons between his extraordinary paintings and his extravagant, flamboyant skating style show a rarely seen aspect of the man. Special techniques using special lenses, lighting and slow motion sequences build to a stunning climax of artistry.

More than any other performer, he's loved and he's hated. But he can never be ignored.

Oceans' Killers 'Silent'

Venomous sea creatures, many who have been populating the earth's oceans since pre-historic times, are explored on Lorne Green's Last of the Wild, Sunday, October 24, at 5 p.m. on Channel 8.

Some of these creatures stun their prey, others paralyze, and some kill outright. For man, the effects of these poisons is generally uncomfortable, often painful, and occasionallyy fatal. Every year, more people are seriously injured or killed by this group of underwater poisoners than are killed by the sea dwellers humans most fear — sharks.

These silent killers come in countless varieties of shapes and sizes. Stonefish, lionfish, sea snakes, jellyfish, sea urchins, carnivorous snails and sea cucumbers all have the ability to poison their prey.

Jellyfish exist in all the oceans of the world. They come in hundreds of sizes and types but have one common bond — loose hanging poisonous tentacles. One variety, which has tentacles up to 50 feet long, was named the "Portuguese Man of War" be ancient fishermen.

The sea urchins' back resembles a poisonous pin cushion, an almost impregnable fortress . . . but not for the giant pufferfish. This large member of the grouper family can emit powerful jets of water that force the urchin to roll over on its back, exposing edible, soft tissue underneath.

RICHARD B. SHULL, who stars as Detective Holmes in ABC's new comedy series, Holmes and Yoyo, likes things with character acquired through age. That's how he came to own a private railroad car once used by whistle-stopping presidential candidates. The former Erie-Lackawanna car, 85 feet long and 10½ feet wide, with a galley, stateroom and AC generator, now serves as Shull's summer home in Warwick, N.Y., some 65 miles northwest of New York City. At top: Shull poses proudly in front of his rolling stock; centre left, he makes repairs. Centre right: Shull and his wife, Marilyn, in suitable vintage clothes pose in front of their 1941 Dodge. Bottom: the Shulls in the galley and bedroom of their home on wheels.

Host Fergie Olver, co-host Jim Coleman and Daryl Wells bring you the finest in thoroughbred racing coverage with The Canadian International Championship Stakes, telecasting live from Woodbine, Saturday, Oct. 23, on Channel 8 at 1:30 p.m.

Now a world classic stakes race the 39th International ranks as one of the most important events in international racing competitions as the finest thoroughbreds in the world compete for what has become one of the richest race purses in Canada.

The 1975 purse of $188,700 was a Canadian record and this year marks the fortieth running of the event. The race is run over the exacting one and five-eighths mile Marshall Turf course.

This year's championship field could include last year's Eclipse Award winning two-year-old of the year, Honest Pleasure, who is making a bid for three-year-old of the year honors, too. Canadian Film Awards Stages Top Performers

The Canadian Film Awards, with Lorne Green as master of ceremonies, will be broadcast from Toronto on Sunday, Oct. 24 at 10 p.m. on Channel 8. A number of top performers are lined up for the event.

"The Canadian Film Awards Festival is 27 years old," says Arthur Weinthal, vice-president and director of CTV entertainment programming and executive producer of the television coverage. "We at the network are pleased to be able to accord this historic event its due recognition. Within the telecast we will bring to our vast viewing audience the full spectrum of the finest in Canadian motion picture production."

The Canadian Film Awards pays homage to the tremendous talents of filmmakers from across the nation. The film sequences and montages to be shown during the telecasts are exerpts from features, documentaries and shorts that, in many cases, are still in distribution in both French and English-speaking Canada.

"The 'Awards' ceremony is one of the ways in, which the CTV Network is again aiding and sharing in the encouragement and development of the growth of the motion picture industry in this country. National exposure of the 'Awards' gives filmmakers, actors, crafts and guilds the status and recognition they have long deserved," Weinthal said.

Producer Bill Davidson said: "This is also the only event in the country that incorporates and honors the talents of almost every guild and organization in Canada that is involved in the movie industry."

The Etrog, the coveted award presented at the ceremony, is a symbol of excellence in the film field. As it has for 27 years, the CFA celebrates, honors and promotes awareness of the films and people of the Canadian film industry to stimulate continuing creativity, higher standards, and greater communications.

The Canadian Film Awards is produced by Davidson, and directed by Michael Steel with executive producer Arthur Weinthal for the CTV Television Network.

A Matter of Size Food for Thought

Nobody has any say any more. We have no say. This statement is the essence of social exploration conducted in A Matter of Size, a provocative documentary, to be seen on Public TV 9, Sunday, October 24 at 7:00 p.m. (rebroadcast Friday, November 5 at 11:00 p.m.

Feelings of frustration, disappointment, disillusionment, and a growing sense of powerlessness in an era of increasing bigness have been expressed by Americans. A Matter of Size presents an overview of these very real concerns of average citizens, along with the rhetoric of politicians and the perspective of scholars in the humanities in a fast-paced half-hour of varied sequences. Scholars, Lewis Mumford, Henry Steele Commanger, and Lester Thurow are among those interviewed.

Mr. Mumford, who actually originated the show's concept, has always expressed concern with the potentially devastating effect of modern technology and urban living on human life and values, and that concern is voiced in this rare television appearance. "We exist," says Mumford, "for the sake of the pyramid builders and the pyramid builders do very little to help our real life."

One of the key figures in A Matter of Size is talk show host Boom Boom Brannigan, who has a knack for provoking his interviewees into saying exactly what's on their minds. Boom Boom invited audience opinions on politics and problems and asked for their views on things big and small.

CLICK AND TREAT
Halloween, the night of ghosts, witches and spirits—what opportunity for masquerade pictures! If you like a series of pictures, start with half-dressed little figures. Next, have the finished costume and then your little ones in the nearly dark streets. Take their pictures knocking on housedoors for "trick or treats" and include orange pumpkin faces, lit with candles, on windowsills; heavy bags filled with sweets, and the joy of eating some of the treats, are just a few suggestions. For all these pictures flash is needed. Outdoors, however, no wall will reflect your flash and insufficient light will show if taken from too far away. Stay in the 10 to 12 foot range and use 1 or 2 "f" stop larger on cameras with adjustable aperture.
For films, flashes and more suggestions, come and see our Certified Photographic Counsellors at JUS-RITE PHOTOS.

Williams Joins Fleming

Peggy Fleming will have Andy Williams as her special guest when she demonstrates the flawless balletic prowess on skates that has earned her an Olympic Gold Medal, world renown as a figure-skating champion and stardom as a performer, in her new special "Peggy Fleming with Holiday on Ice at Madison Square Garden," to be presented Tuesday, Oct. 26 at 8 p.m. on Channel 12.

The Muppets and magician Mark Wilson are also among the guests on the musical extravaganza taped before an audience during this year's "Holiday on Ice" show at Madison Square Garden in New York City. Among highlights of the special, a production of Bob Banner Associates, is Miss Fleming's dramatic ice ballet to the music of "Love Is." Andy Williams joins her on skates as he sings "If You Ever Believed" and "Sing a Song."

Backed by the Holiday On Ice skaters, whose precision, speed and grace have built them an international reputation, Williams also sings "Tryin' to Forget I Love You" in a "Country Roads" sequence which salutes the American "heartland."

Musical Play With Humor

"Philemon," a musical play written and composed by Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt, authors of "The Fantasticks" and "I Do, I Do," will be presented on Hollywood Television Theatre, Monday, Oct. 25 at 9 p.m.

Set in the Roman city of Antioch in the year 287, "Philemon" is the story of Cockian (Dick Latessa), an unemployed actor-clown, who is persuaded by the Roman commander (Howard Ross) to impersonate Philemon, a leader of the Christian underground. In return for a promised passage back to Athens, Cockian agrees to go to jail, infiltrate the prisoners and betray their leaders.

As Cockian comes to know the Christians, he becomes more and more ambivalent about the role he is playing, and gradually takes on the attributes of the real Philemon.

For the past six years, Tom Jones and Harvey Schmidt have been working privately in their own theatre-workshop in New York. Last year, for the first time, they allowed the public to see some of the results. Now, with the telecast of "Philemon" the rest of the country gets a chance as well.

The cast of this production has been transferred intact to television by Hollywood Television Theatre executive producer Norman Lloyd, who directs the performance. Besides Latessa and Ross, the cast includes Charles Blackburn, Michael Glenn-Smith, Kathryn King Segal, Virginia Gregory, and Leila Martin.

Renaissance Man Charles Eames Featured on TV 9

"The objective is to get many of the rewards of life from the work that you do," suggests Charles Eames, architect, designer, communications expert, filmmaker, scientist and 68-year-old Renaissance man, who, with his wife and professional partner, Ray, is the subject of a 90-minute documentary, An Eames Celebration: Several Worlds of Charles and Ray Eames. The program will be telecast on Public TV 9 on Tuesday, Oct. 26 at 8 p.m. (rebroadcast Sunday, Oct. 31 at 3:30 p.m.).

Produced by Perry Miller Adato, who won an Emmy for her portrait of Dylan Thomas and additional honors for her film "Gertrude Stein: When This You See, Remember Me.

An Eames Celebration pays tribute to the continuing and evolving achievements of Charles and Ray Eames, whose co-ventures in the world of ideas score them far beyond their original ambitions as architect and artist.

Ray Eames, an artist who trained under Hans Hoffman, became Eames wife and professional partner in the early 50's when she first worked with him and his collaborator, Eero Saarinen at the Cranbrook Academy of Art on models for the first and now classic modern furniture designs.

In An Eames Celebration, Charles and Ray Eames are seen in their Santa Monica, California, home, which they designed and built 25 years ago out of standard steel factory-shed materials. An architectural and artistic triumph, it is described in the film by architect-critic Peter Blake as "one of the most significant houses built in this century,"

Rock Music Can be Deafening

Prolonged exposure to loud rock music can cause deafness, a researcher at Leeds Polytechnic School in London has determined.

After studying audiograms of 102 people who attended discotheques on an average of once a week, then comparing them with a control group, he found that 10 per cent had hearing losses great enough to cause difficulty in understanding speech.

CBC Radio Report Proposes Major Programming Changes

The complete restructuring of the radio arts department, and a five-year plan for the development of broadcast music, are two of the major proposals made in a CBC report

The study was commissioned last fall by W. T. Armstrong, managing director of CBC Radio's English network. It was carried out by a small group of CBC Radio producers and officers who interviewed more than a thousand producers, artists, composers, listeners and others across the country.

The 325-page report examines every aspect of arts and music programming carried on the CBC English Radio network and concludes that the "Golden Age of Radio is now" rather than in some nostalgic memory of the past.

Management has given its first response, point by point, to the nearly one hundred recommendations made in the report. It agrees that the restructuring of the radio arts department should be the subject of further immediate study. Management also agrees with most of the suggestions, but points out that development has to be phased as the necessary funds become available. The report will now be reviewed by divisonal management within the context of other Corporate and divisional priorities.

The report strongly endorses the new scheduling philosophy — particularly the concept of block programming — which will be even more evident in the Fall schedules. However, the report is critical of the departments it reviews. They have not, it says, matched information programming in keeping pace with changing audience needs.

The organizational problems of radio arts, the report says, have been brought about by historical accident and neglect. The study recommends that the department be restructured to be solely concerned with drama and radio literature. Many other suggestions have been made for the improvement of Radio Arts, ranging from ways to develop new actors and writers, to the increased funding of regional drama production.

Examining the present state of broadcast music on CBC Radio, the study group says there is a great need for more surprise and excitement in its presentation, with 'warm, knowledgeable hosts or presenters.' For music and variety, the group strongly recommends the exploitation of the Star System — the promotion of most popular performers.

The report takes "serving the audience" as its theme and says the CBC should be developing a bigger share of the available audience in arts and music. It says there are nearly 1.75 million paying theatre spectators and nearly 900,000 listeners to classical music concerts in English Canada every three months. Radio arts, music and drama are missing a large and vital part of what the group calls 'this natural constituency.'

The report advocates an increase in the number of producers before further expansion of programs and that training be provided for many of the producers already on staff.

Throughout the report, there are references to the conditions under which arts and music programs are produced. The study group says that plant and studios set aside for this purpose are 'a national disgrace.'

The radio project group conducting the study consisted of Doug Field, (chairman) formerly director of radio, Edmonton; John Douglas, arts producer, Halifax; Harold Redekopp, music producer, Winnipeg. The co-ordinator was Bob Blackwood.

FAMILY'S LIFE EXAMINED

The thoughts, feelings and activities of an American family spending a year in Micronesia are closely scrutinized in As Long As We're Together, airing Tuesday, Oct. 26 at 10 p.m. on Public TV 9.

Producers Stirlin and Victoria Harris lived with Ken and Janie Read and their four children for three months in 1971, recording and filming them spontaneously in their daily lives on the Palau Islands.

Inuit Culture Featured In CBC Images Series

Spirit In a Landscape, The People Beyond, a CBC-TV special in the Images of Canada series, focuses on the little-known people of Canada's Arctic, the Inuit, through their distinctive art. It will be telecast on the network Wednesday, Oct. 27, at 9 p.m. The show took a year and a half to make.

Eskimo sculpture and art prints are highly valued on this continent and abroad, and this beautiful one-hour film features works by 165 artists of Canada's North, in 24 settlements.

Inuit art is an anachronism — a modern art form reflecting a culture shrouded in the mists of time. The film takes viewers to the land of the Inuit, a cruel environment in which the white man is alien. Yet the Inuit, the people of that land, have survived 'beyond the treeline' for some 4,000 years.

The Eskimo "artistic explosion" of the past 25 years involves about half of the Inuit population of 18,000 — and adds up to an extraordinary cultural inventory of a way of life that existed centuries before the white man came.

Spirit In a Landscape is the first CBC-TV program to be presented in three different language versions — English, French, and Inuktitut (the language of the Inuit). The Inuktitut version will be telecast on CBC's Northern Service on the same night as the English network telecast (Oct. 27). The French version is scheduled to be presented on Radio Canada at a later date.

Carol Myers, who produced and directed this Images of Canada special, filmed on location at Baker Lake, Spence Bay and other settlements in the Arctic. Barbara Moon, the script writer, also did her research on location, talking with the people, and the sound track features the voices of many of the people with whom she talked.

Narrators of the film are Minnie Freeman (originally from Cape Hope Island, Hudson's Bay); anthropologist Dr. William E. Taylor, director of the National Museum of Man in Ottawa; and actor Douglas Rain, breathing life into the poetry of the Danish anthropologist Rasmussen, himself part Eskimo (who wrote Across Arctic America).

Shown to some members of the press at a fall season preview in Toronto recently, Images of Canada — Spirit In a Landscape drew this comment from Rosa Harris, writing in the Montreal Sunday Express: "The show . . . has to be one of the most beautiful documentaries about Inuit art ever made. Subtle, alluring, never condescending . . ."

'Intern's Life Hard'

"Intern," a 30-minute film produced by KING-TV and sponsored by King County Medical Blue Shield, will air Wednesday, Oct. 27 at 8 p.m. on Channel 5.

Photographer Al Stenson followed Dr. Andrew Feld, an intern at University Hospital in Seattle, for two days as he examined patients, puzzled over mysterious symptoms, despaired over the future of one patient and fought to save the life of another. The film documents the brutal hours interns must work, days lasting from 7 a.m. to 11 p.m. with barely ten minutes to eat or sit down. The film also shows the doubts and risks interns must live with, the good they can do and the dedication that keeps them going.

World's Best in 'Skate Canada'

Canada, the United States, the Soviet Union, Great Britain, Finland, East Germany, Austria, Italy, Japan and many other countries' outstanding figure skaters will compete in world class competition for international recognition in "Skate Canada '76", colourcasting live from the Ottawa Civic Centre with hosts Johnny Esaw, Otto Jelinek and Debbie Wilkes, on Friday, Oct. 29, at 7 p.m. on Channel 8.

Part ballet, part gymnastics, figure skating has been the event that has brought more World and Olympic gold medals to Canada than any other sport. In these competitions, Canadian athletes have the opportunity to face stiff competition under world championship conditions and gain recognition from international judges and audiences.

"There is added excitement," says Johnny Esaw, executive producer, "in these 'Skate Canada' competitions in that they are being held in Ottawa, the home of Barbara Ann Scott who was the first North American to win a World Championship and Olympic Championship. It is also appropriate that the first and second place Canadians, Lynn Nightingale and Kim Alletson both hail from Barbara Ann's skating club."

"Skate Canada '76" is the first event in CTV's coverage of figure skating's triple crown. From Ottawa, Canadian competitors will be working towards qualification for the Canadian Figure Skating Championships in Calgary this February and the World's from Tokyo in March.

"These competitions should be among the best yet," producer Ralph Abraham says.

Agronsky Lines Up Ford

Martin Agronsky's series Agronsky at Large brings a new emphasis to Public TV 9's Public Affairs programming. The series debuts Friday, October 29 at 10 p.m. and then moves to Sundays at 7 p.m., as part of Public Affairs Night on Public TV 9.

Subjects of Agronsky's interviews include prominent American and foreign political figures such as President Valery Giscard d'Estaing of France and Britain's Prime Minister James Callaghan. Leaders of several Middle Eastern and Communist nations have also agreed to appear.

QB VII: TV Extravaganza on 13

A courtroom drama made for TV Extravaganza, QB VII, will be shown in two three-hour parts on CKVU-TV, cable 13. The first part is scheduled for Friday, Oct. 29, at 9 p.m., the second on Sunday, Oct. 31, at 9 p.m.

The drama of QB VII, a milestone in television programming, tells the stories of two men, one a noted American writer, (played by Ben Gazzara), the other, a European doctor (played by Anthony Hopkins), whose careers culminate in a dramatic and suspenseful confrontation at London's Royal Courts of Justice in Queen's Bench Courtroom No. VII (hence, the title QB VII).

The story is based on a real Courtroom trial in which Leon Uris was the defendant in a suit growing out of his novel Exodus.

In the courtroom drama the writer Abe Cody, (Ben Gazzara), accuses the doctor, Dr. Adam Kelo, (Anthony Hopkins), of performing illegal operations for medical experiments during the Second World War. Denying this, the doctor sues for libel. The story spans a quarter of a century, from 1945 to 1973, tracing the lives of both men from the end of the war through their courtroom confrontation.

MACLEAR REPORT REVIEWS MODERN GREEK 'TRAGEDY'

A review of the military dictatorship which controlled Greece from 1967 until 1974, will be the subject of Maclear on Thursday, Oct. 28, at 9:30 p.m. on Channel 8.

On the eve of the national elections in 1967, a nameless, faceless group of colonels took over the capital of Greece, imprisoned Premier George Papandreaou, suspended parliament and abolished law. Because of fear, because the people believed themselves helpless, impotence became silence there for seven terrible years.

Eight million Greeks fell with Athens instead of resisting and, from 1967-1974, the birthplace of democracy slipped blindly into a barbaric age. The Voices of Silence recalls the Greece of the colonels in the shattered lives of the people, how little they did, and could do. "No heritage ensures us against tyranny" correspondent Michael Maclear, says. The land that bore Socrates then put him to death, still provides a warning against the silence that can enchain us all.

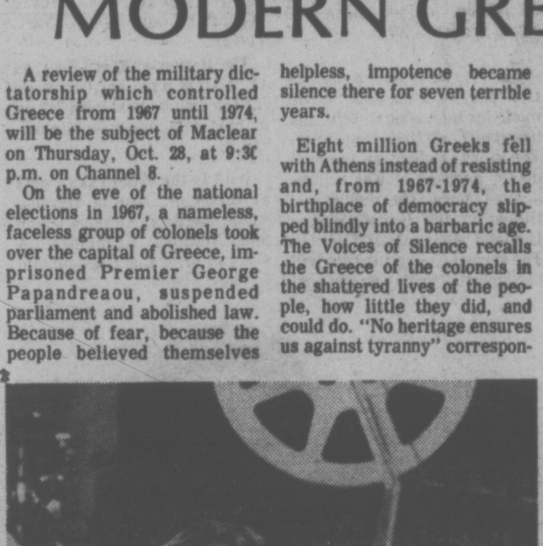
Kay Cicellis, a writer living in Athens at the time, details how easily the colonels established their rule, by cutting telephone communication, imposing curfews and fostering a sense of isolation. When it came to maintaining power, it was fear, the colonel's greatest weapon, that immobilized the people. "It got worse and worse as we found out more about torture" Kay remembers, "the first detailed information began coming out six months after they came to power." "No ordinary person," says Maclear, "could contemplate the tortures practiced here — electrical shocks, head screws, burning, starvation, mock execution — yet ordinary people endured these just because the fear of it kept them silent."

Talking with Maclear, two such ordinary citizens, Roula Christidou and Tasso Goulas, reveal their attitudes: regretful, yet utter passivity. So, life under the colonels, supported by foreign aid or indifference, became random arrest and torture. Maclear notes that, with the exception of a few like Yannis Koronas, "people didn't see that in extraordinary times, ordinary ways must change." Jailed and tortured for almost four years after planting a bomb outside Dictator Papadopolous' office, Koronas — a politically conservative lawyer — explains that the worst torture was seeing and hearing from his prison, the ongoing life of the silent city.

Finally, in November of 1973, the people stood together at last. Actual film footage of the ill-fated uprising at the Athens Polytechnic, documents the dramatic struggle of students and workers who barricaded themselves inside the building and, while all Athens watched, endured a six-day seige until overwhelmed by tanks, police and troops. "I think that was the turning point," says Kay Cicellis, "most people in Athens had a son or daughter among the students. It was marvellous and . . . unbearable."

"It was a moment really quite classical," states Maclear, "moment noble but futile." In conversation with Costas Mikakis, one of the students present at the seige, he ascertains that less than one percent of the population participated in the resistance. "Many families," Maclear notes, "didn't even claim their dead, fearing reprisals."

Then, just as suddenly as they had come, the colonels resigned, leaving behind the machinery of their regime. "The Greeks never did purge themselves of the colonels nor of their guilt, humiliation, shame, fear", concludes Maclear, and "the evil, having not been faced, still persists." For today, though many suffered and died, in prison and outside it, the colonels walk free — they still live.



TONY RANDALL as Judge Walter Franklin, with furrowed brow, views a "blue" movie to render a judgment on whether or not it should be shown in a local theatre, in Case: The Snow White Affair," on the ABC Television Netowrk's "The Tony Randall Show," airing on Thursday, Oct. 28 at 9 p.m. on Channel 8.

Television Mailbag

By RICK ROBERTS

HOLLYWOOD — The TV Mailbag:

Q. Someone must have goofed. I read recently that Bill Burrud is 50. He has to be older if he went to high school in 1933, which this article said he did. How old is he? — E.M.H., Cherry Hill, N.J.

A. Bill Burrud was born Jan. 12, 1925, making him 51. You are right, someone must have made a mistake on the years he went to high school. With just some rough calculating the years must have been from around 1940-43.

Q. Can you give some information on the background of Alex Trebek and where I can write to him? — B.C., Sierra Vista, Ariz.

A. Sure. Trebek, 35, is now serving as host of the daytime game show, "High Rollers."

He made his debut on American television as host of "Wizard of Odds."

Trebek was one of the top television personalities in Canada, hosting an afternoon talk show prior to appearing on American television.

A native of Sudbury, Ottawa, Trebek began his career with the Canadian Broadcasting Co. as a newsman and host of several shows, also working as a sports announcer.

You can write to him in care of NBC, 3000 W. Alameda Ave., Burbank, Calif. 91523.

Q. It seems like you've written about everyone but Erin Moran from "Happy Days." Can you tell about her and where she can be contacted? — R.B., Hayward, Calif.

A. Erin Moran, who plays Joanie Cunningham on the popular series, was born Oct. 18, 1960, in Burbank, Calif.

She has been working since she was 6 years old, appearing in television commercials.

She was one of the regulars in the "Daktari" series and has appeared in several other television shows as a guest, including "The Waltons," "The Courtship of Eddie's Father" and "My Three Sons."

You can write to her in care of ABC, 4151 Prospect Ave., Hollywood, Calif. 90027.

Q. I heard that Michael Ontkean, who had been on "The Rookies," is sick. Is this true? Why did he ever leave the series? — J. S., Somerdale, N.J.

A. So far as it is known, Ontkean, who played Officer Willie Gillis on the show, is not sick. He left "The Rookies" because, he said, he was not happy with the role he had. The last heard from him was that he was acting in his native Canada.

Questions of general interest will be answered in the column. Volume of mail prohibits personal replies. Inquiries should be sent to Rick Roberts, TV Mailbag, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

TOM SULLIVAN
. . . blindness helped

HOLLYWOOD — Actor - writer - composer - Tom Sullivan is blind, but he found playing a man losing his sight on "M-A-S-H" tough, because the character Tom was interpreting was acutely depressed whereas Sullivan himself is a chronic optimist.

"Had Alan Alda and the others on 'M-A-S-H' not been so sensitive, it would have been very hard for me to play a man whose attitude is exactly the reverse of my own," Sullivan says.

"I was playing a guy who was wondering whether he could cope with blindness, who didn't know how he could live with the handicap.

"But I've found that blindness actually gives me an advantage.

"If you've read my book ('If You Could See What I Hear'), you know my view of life is optimistc."

While Sullivan made his acting debut in "M-A-S-H," it's fair to call him an actor, since he's also played a role in "Airport 1977."

And he'll soon be involved with pictures again when his "If You Could See What I Hear" goes before cameras for Paramount.

"The script is almost finished, and I'm very comfortable with it," Sullivan says. "I didn't write it, but I had almost total script control.

"Casting will begin right away.

"Both the Bridges brothers. Jeff and Beau, and Richard Thomas are among the actors under consideration to play me.

"Of the three, I think Jeff is the one who's closest to me in personality."

One feels an impulse to ask Sullivan which of the three looks most like him, but then one remembers that he not only doesn't know what they look like, he doesn't even know what he looks like, since he's been blind from birth.

However, his handcap, if one insists upon calling it such, has scarcely limited his activities. While earning his degree in clinical psychology at Harvard, Sullivan rowed on the Harvard eight-oar rowing team and wrestled well enough to quality for the 1968 U.S. Olympic wrestling team.

Further, he plays golf and basketball and has tried sky diving.

After studying at the New England Conservatory of Music and Berkley School of Music in Boston, Sullivan proved his competence as a composer by writing material for such artists as Pat Boone, Sammy Davis Jr. and the Osmonds.

As a singer, he records for ABC Records; he's written a couple of children's books that are in print; and he's currently working on a novel, "The Manager," which will come out as a New American Library paperback "as soon as I can find time to finish it," Sullivan says.

But his principal endeavor is work with and for the handicapped. He's on the president's committee for job opportunities for the handicapped and is involved in projects to aid children around the world.

And the message he communicates to the fullest is that, with the right philosophy, the joy of living can far outweigh the inconvenience of a physical impairment.

When Max was star of "The Beverly Hillbillies" who ever would have guessed that he'd contribute so artistically to "human values?"

Attraction Breeds Aura

Two Connecticut College researchers have found that people give off auras which indicate like or dislike for other people.

Dr. Bernard Murstein and graduate student Serge Hadjolian conducted experiments in which two people placed their fingertips on a photographic plate through which a current was passed. When the two subjects liked each other, a strong aura emanated from the fingertips covering the plate. If there was no attraction, no aura appeared.

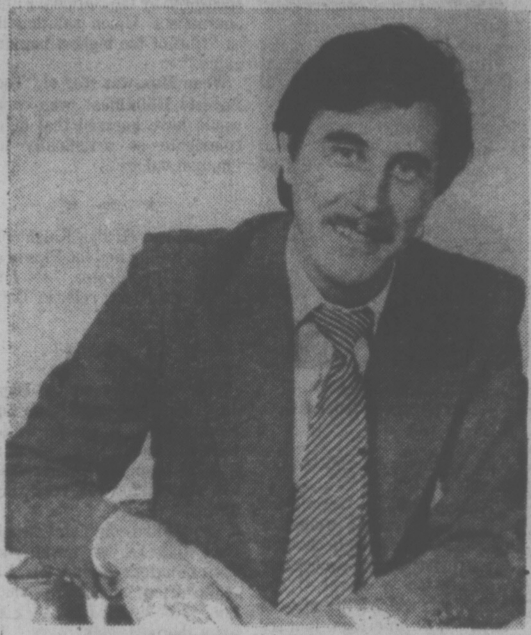
Record Reviews

By DAVE MARSH



BRYAN FERRY . . . Third solo album

BRYAN FERRY: "Let's Stick Together.'

With his third solo album, Roxy Music's lead singer occupies himself with something beyond the standard oldies fare which predominated his first pair: reinterpretations of Roxy songs like '2 HB' and 'Re-make-Re-model.' The oldies remain so mannered that meaning is obliterated, in the same way that Bob Dylan's most recent singing style changes his songs — but 'Shame, Shame, Shame' and the Everly Brothers' 'The Price of Love' are more than interesting attempts. The key factor is the band, which features most prominently Roxy drummer Paul Thompson and ace session guitarist Chris Spedding. The music manages to be championship class rock and roll and art-rock simultaneously, the closest Ferry the soloist has come to the excitement of Roxy Music itself.

"BOSTON"

This New England band with a California producer is being trumpeted as America's closest approximation of the heavy and pretentious British rock school, as represented by Led Zeppelin and Yes. And Boston truly have that kind of sound down pat — unlike most other heavy art-rock pretenders, there's a good singer and a fine melodic sense at work here. But the form has its limitations: "More Than a Feeling" sounds like a hit for most tastes, but too much of the rest relies on aimless noodling, endemic to a genre devoted to creating the false illusion of importance.

BUNNY WAILER: "Blackheart Man"

Like his fellow founding members of the Wailers, Bob Marley and Peter Tosh, Bunny has a fine voice. Unlike them, however, he has little idea of how to create an exciting musical structure. Although the Rastafarian-political lyrics have a certain fascination for the initiated, "Blackheart Man" is one of the most relentlessly dull pieces of music released recently.

RICHIE HAVENS: "The End of the Beginning"

Old gravel-voice, one of the strangest of folk-rock stylists, is back, with a new set of mostly intepretive material. Havens has it in him to be a greater interpreter, if only because his taste in material is so fine: Dylan's 'If Not For You' and Van Morrison's 'Wild Night' are standout ideas. But his tendency to solemnity is overbearing. In his hands, even the Doobie Brothers notably jolly 'Long Train Running' seems fit for the ominous Barry White. On the other hand, his version of 'I'm Not in Love' is so portentous that it comes off better than the too-self-conscious original.

DALTON & DUBARRI: "Success & Failure"

Each and every tune on this album is so effervescently bright and happy as to make John Denver seem a paradigm of gloom. The production and music abet this mindless Pollyanna approach. Produced, written and arranged by D&D themselves — at home — so there's nowhere else to place the blame. The year's worst.

Indian Vocalist a Legend

LATA MANGESHKAR

The world's most prolific recording artist, credited with no less than 25,000 songs in 30 years, and reigning as the unrivalled popular singer of modern times — from the Middle East all the way through Indonesia and Thailand — recently showed North Americans why she is so popular.

Lata Mangeshkar is diminutive in stature but has a voice called "as towering as the Himalayas," and her tour proved it.

Enshrined by her countrymen in mystic qualities, Miss Mangeshkar performed before a packed house at Boston's Berklee Performance Centre, as she did in Vancouver, Washington, New York, and Houston, Montreal, Toronto, Detroit, and Philadelphia.

Flocking to hear her have been South Asians of every variety — Arabs, Pakistanis, Indians, West Indians, Ceylonese, and Indians from East Africa, to name a few — willing to pay as much as $50 a ticket to listen to the poignant, ethereal voice of India's most illustrious playback singer, a legend in her own time.

To those brought up on Bach and Bacharach, this musical world is strangely peaceful, delicate, and inward-looking. After a while, patterns seem to emerge in the melodic flow and a kind of euphoria grips the audience.

Indian classical music has gained wide popularity in the West via the musical persuasions of Ravi Shanker, partly because it relies on instrumental sound. The vocal recitals of Miss Mangeshkar, by contrast, may prove somewhat obscure. Its dependence on lyrics and poems derives from particular linguistic traditions relatively unknown outside the Middle East and South Asia.

Yet, this woman, dressed in a plain white cotton sari with no visible ornamentation, whom Nehru once accused of making him weep with her music, possesses a style that is persuasive and compelling beyond any cultural parameter.

She calls to mind her 16th-century musical ancestor, Meera Bai, a Rajput princess in India, who, by means of devotional music in the Sanskritic vernacular, was the first South Asian artist to "popularize" lyrical music, shattering the erudite monopoly of the religious and literary elite.

KATHRYN GRAYSON
. . . four-octave vocal range

The Stars of Yesterday

Where Are They Today?

HOLLYWOOD — By the time Kathryn Grayson was 15 years old, her pretty face and four-octave vocal range had put her under contract to MGM and into the studio's famous Little Red Schoolhouse attended by such celebrated youngsters as Elizabeth Taylor, Roddy McDowall and Virginia Weidler.

A few years later, these same attributes made her one of the lot's most popular properties: Howard Keel's co-star in "Showboat," "Lovely to Look At" and "Kiss Me, Kate;" Mario Lanza's co-star in "That Midnight Kiss" and "The Toast of New Orleans;" and Gene Kelly's and Frank Sinatra's co-star in "Anchors Aweigh."

Today Kathryn is still blessed with her pretty face and such a glorious voice that on the final night of a recent engagement at the Eden Roc the audience kept her singing until 5 in the morning!

Grayson stopped at the famous Polo Lounge of the Beverly Hills Hotel the other day to talk about her work, past and future; her daughter, Patti; and her two-year-old granddaughter, Kristi.

Patti, like her mother, sings, but a career doesn't interest her as much as her family.

Kathryn had just returned from Cannes where she, with a group of stars, had gone to promote "That's Entertainment, Part Two" and where she'd been mobbed by reporters.

She spent two horrendous nights in France, her publicist mentioned, "because she was below Tarzan's suite, and he spent the time giving his call."

The Tarzan of the incident was Johnny Weissmuller, another star in the MGM party.

"Later a reporter asked me to give the call," Kathryn laughed, "and I did it better than Johnny, because I have a trained voice."

"'That's Entertainment, Part Two' is a fun picture," she continued on a different subject. "But one thing in it hurt me, a scene which seemed to make fun of Jeannette MacDonald, because she was my idol."

Tony Martin, heading for an adjoining booth, interrupted Kathryn to give her a kiss. Then she picked up her thought.

"When I was a little girl, I used to take my lunch to the movies and sit there all day enjoying Jeannette MacDonald and Nelson Eddy."

As scarcely more than a child at MGM, Kathryn said she was able to keep her balance, because of her down-to-earth home life.

"My work didn't mean a thing to our family," she said, "except that it was something I enjoyed doing. My mother wasn't a stage mother at all.

"In fact, she didn't even go to the studio, because the teacher MGM had for the young players was with me all the time.

"Judy Garland is the only one who ever made that claim," she said. "As a matter of fact, Mayer was very keen about everyone staying in good health which is why we had a gymnasium at the studio and ballet lessons and that sort of thing.

"I've always had a very happy time as an actress and singer. I enjoyed making movies.

"Originally I wanted to be a grand opera singer, but luckily a good God stepped in, and I went to MGM."

Underwater Photography Offers Real Challenge

By GERRY WINDLE

If you think you have problems making your pictures, consider what underwater photographers force upon themselves by undertaking their challenging field.

The first thing they have to do is make their equipment waterproof. This means enclosing their valuable cameras in expensive, heavy metal housings which sometimes leak and can destroy cameras worth hundreds of dollars.

Once the camera has been made watertight the problems are only beginning. The things we take for granted topside become major problems underwater.

Take light. When light enters water it is "refracted" or bent, thus underwater objects will appear much closer than they actually are. Fortunately for the underwater photographer, the camera sees the same way as his eyes so he merely sets his focus on the subject as he sees it.

Once the light rays are in the water another phenomena occurs. The blue-green water acts as a filter absorbing the warmer colors of the red end of the color spectrum.

At only 10 feet deep, the reds are substantially reduced. At 25 feet, they are almost nonexistent. At 30 feet, oranges disappear. Yellow is next to go. Greens last until about 100 feet before disappearing. At these depths colors begin to appear as a blue monochrome.

This is deceiving since in actuality the ocean floor is alive with brilliant colors. The underwater photographer must supply his own light source to restore these colors lost in the water. This means another housing for a flash unit.

Then there is the problem of visibility. Even in water with "perfect" visibility, the underwater photographer is making his pictures as if on a foggy or hazy day.

To overcome this effect, the wide-angle is used to cut the distance required between camera and subject. But the water works against him again. Since light is refracted in water, the effect also works on the lens. A wide-angle lens such as a 28mm or 35mm will photograph an area equivalent to a 50mm lens topside.

To solve this problem, the photographer must have a "corrected" dome on his camera housing. This dome appears as a giant plastic bubble through which the camera is pointed. This round shape compensates for the narrowing effect of the water.

Film is also another consideration for the underwater photographer. Since he is working under low light conditions, he must use a high speed film for best results.

The photographer underwater must take all these things into consideration before coming up with the proper exposure. Once again he reverts to his trusty exposure meter, but this also must have its own waterproof case so he can use it underwater.

You can see that the underwater photographer must face many challenges to get his pictures. Add to this the fact that he is also burdened down with air tanks, weight belts, flippers, scuba and other assorted gear.

The next time you see an underwater picture, just stop and consider what the photographer must have gone through to get the picture and it will take on a whole new appearance to you as a photographer.

THIS UNDERWATER SWIMMER, loaded down with equipment, gives you some idea of the difficulties faced in this challenging field of photography. Not only must everything be waterproofed but also he is burdened with air tanks, weight belts, flippers, scuba and other assorted gear.

It's tempting to try to organize this review of The Seventh Hexagram along the structural lines of the novel itself. But to do that it would be necessary to begin at the end and end again at the beginning, and to write all the main points down on little white index cards and shuffle them thoroughly before transferring their disordered logic to paper.

If I sound slightly acidic this time around it's because The Seventh Hexagram could have been — should have been — a solid, smashing success. It's got color, authenticity, conflict, violence, sex and, above all, the weight of modern Chinese history behind it, a history that we know far too little about and that is enormously interesting and instructive.

The man who wrote it, Ian McLachlan, spent 10 years in Hong Kong before coming to Canada and a professorship at Trent University. The skill with which he describes Hong Kong makes it clear that his years there were well spent. But was this novel the best use he could have made of his material?

The many fine descriptive moments in The Seventh Hexagram tend to make one wish McLachlan had turned his talents to social history instead. Listen to this passage, about the "bottom" of Hong Kong: "Where the factories stopped, the slums began. Land was too good, too expensive for the poor. They had to live on the sea. We came to a breakwater where once there must have been a beach. With the tide out all I could see was 10 yards of foul-smelling black slime: oil and mud and vegetable skins and excrement, rotting in the ooze. On top of that were the houses, hovels, rising on spindly matchstick legs; branches, driftwood, slats of boxes nailed illogically together, not a straight line in sight. The walls and roofs of the shacks were made of the first thing that came to hand, rusty metal, oiled paper, canvas, cardboard, wooden slats, a fifty-year-old ad for Singer sewing machines. You might have found it framed on the wall of a chic Parisian flat. Not one of these buildings would have stood up on its own, but together, hundreds of them huddled against each other, they survived, until the next typhoon."

It is the same with an old revolutionary's reminiscences of the Long March. McLachlan uses them as background for the modern-day conflicts of his plot, but what array of characters and their schemes can compete with the drama of the Long March itself? McLachlan even has his protagonist, English reporter Joe Stewart, confess their mutual difficulty: "So why are the stories I have to tell so different from his? How I envy him their simplicity and force, their achievement . . . mine divide and divide again, and every end is knotted in with all the others."

This may help to explain why McLachlan chose to devise his own incredibly knotty plot, but it scarcely excuses it. For the time sequence of The Seventh Hexagram is so fragmented, so scrambled, that it scrapes the reader's patience to the bone. Suspense is thrown out the window. So is much of our sympathy for McLachlan's characters, who nearly all suffer from a terminal case of what Robert Fulford, in his alter ego as Marshall Delaney, once termed the "Stupidity Problem".

What remains is a nicely-contrived balance between Kwan, the Maoist intellectual-turned-terrorist who can sympathize with Hong Kong's poor and point out the colony's economic usefulness to China in the same breath; Donald Winn, the British intelligence officer who comes on like Sydney Greenstreet in a porno flick and is nearly as comic as he is dangerous; and Jordan King, the aging revolutionary who's only half-Chinese and therefore only half willing to accept the "Asian time-scale" and wait for a grass-roots revolution.

These three form a tight circle within which poor Joe Stewart gets kicked around like a leaky tin can. Joe is cast as a western-style innocent with socialist ideals, but he's really only a dumb, selfish clod. He indulges in a prodigious amount of clinically-detailed sex, gets badly beaten up, is impaled on a tree stump as a result of a car accident, is directly involved in three murders, and winds up in Northern Ontario writing his memoirs.

Ultimately, though, The Seventh Hexagram rises above its essentially silly hero and its needlessly convoluted time scheme. Like Shaun Herron, Ian McLachlan knows how to probe the moral implications of violence, and his grasp of his subject seems strong and sure. I hope we hear from him again.

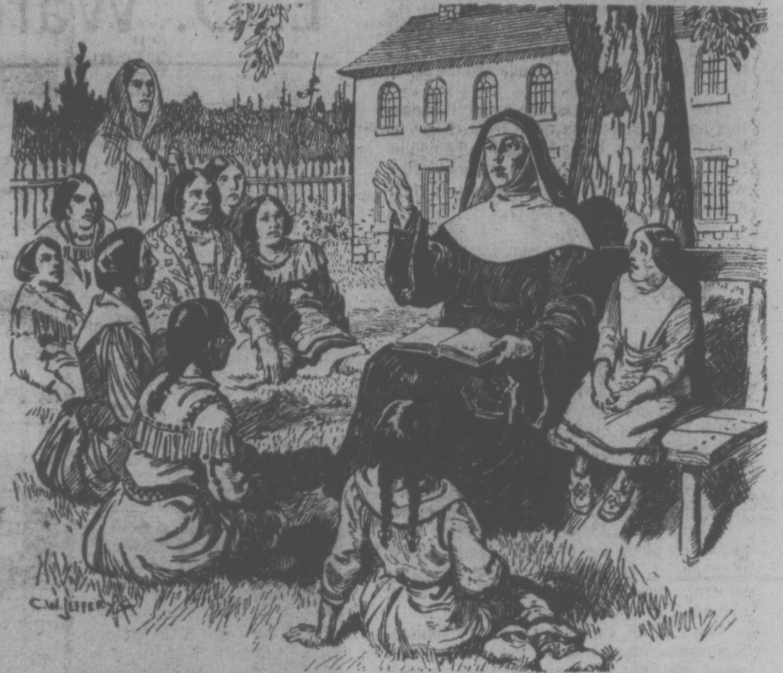
The First Sisterhood

By JUDITH BURKETT



Mother Marie teaching Indian children in Ursuline convent she founded in Quebec City in 1639.

Artists, writers, poets and, I'm afraid, even pornographers have always been fascinated by the serene figure of the nun. Draped in austere black, her face encircled in white, her quiet countenance reflecting numberless days spent in the contemplation of the divine, she evokes in us an image of cloistered tranquility.

Such a vision of other-worldly unreality would amuse no-one more than the sisters themselves. "Nuns" was written, by a Jewess, as an attempt to shine new light on a world made mysterious more by our dusty imaginations than by ancient reality. And while it is difficult to define just what it is Mrs. Bernstein did find in the modern convent, it bears little resemblance to the traditional outsiders' view of the nun as a frustrated old maid who spends her life on her knees, gets up at absurd hours, is perpetually fasting and never, ever, has any fun.

The Second Vatican Council convened by John XXIII had possibly its most profound effect in the re-evaluation and renewal of the religious life. For the first time since the Council of Trent forbade nuns to leave their enclosures in 1545, nuns are going out into the world in large numbers.

All orders of women religious have experienced some degree of change as a direct result of Vatican II, some of them changing almost beyond recognition. But the renewal is not confined to a revamping of the religious Rule. Monks and nuns as individuals have been forced to question the meaning of their lives as religious and many of them are leaving their orders, a course no longer so difficult or guilt-laden. Many religious, both men and women, now feel that God's work can be done, and perhaps done better, outside the confines of monastic rules and walls. For women religious, the major grievance is their lack of any decision-making voice in the most exclusive male club in the world, the Catholic Church.

The prime question facing religious today is one of relevance to modern society. Does the religious life have a valid place in the late twentieth century? Can it possibly serve any function in the twenty-first? "Nuns" attempts no philosophy, poses no questions and suggests no answers. It is, rather, a study of those questions posed by the members of religious communities themselves and considers, in good journalistic style, some of their answers.

But it is really far too soon for answers. The great wheels are in motion after four centuries; as yet, there is not much to indicate where or when they will stop again.

The most drastic changes are occurring in the communities of North America, where many groups no longer live in a convent at all but share apartments, taking jobs, wearing secular clothes and a modest amount of make-up. They go to bed when they choose and there is no fixed schedule of prayers. For sisters working in such fields as drug addiction or the rehabilitation of prisoners, this living arrangement has obvious advantages. The pertinent question here for the Church and the religious themselves is the relevance of the monastic aspect of prayer and community.

In contrast, there is the primary monastic way of life of the contemplative nuns. These are the members of the orders of Carmelites, Benedictines, Cistercians and Poor Clares who are still enclosed, that is who do not leave their convents and whose prime purpose is a dedication to God through prayer in the traditional way. The first chapter of the book is a fascinating and informative account of a day in the lives of the nuns of a Carmelite monastery in Wales. The Carmelite order, founded by the great Spanish mystic St. Teresa of Avila in the 16th century, still keeps the Canonical hours of prayer and recites Divine Office. Vatican II has made their lives less austere; the iron grilles are gone and they are allowed home for emergencies. However, the sisters of Llandovery in no way saw themselves as deprived. Their lives are filled with hard work and no small measure of happiness.

In fact, the enclosed orders are experiencing an increase in the number of postulants, the only orders to do so. The other orders are losing members faster than they are gaining them, and superiors are becoming fussier about whom they will accept. Convents have long housed women who were not really suited to the life. Now, many orders require strict psychological tests to weed out those entering for the wrong reasons. The exodus would seem necessary. Those who decide to stay should in the long run form the basis of more stable communities.

"Nuns" makes no attempt to analyze, or even pull together the facts it presents and extract meaning from them. Whether this is to be regarded as a weakness, I suspect would depend upon the point of view with which the reader approaches the subject. But the absence of such a pulling-together leaves a vagueness which is difficult to pin down. On the plus side, it makes for fascinating reading and is sure to answer any little curiosities such as what a nun wears under her bonnet or whether she really has to be a virgin.

And for those readers who are fascinated by nuns but put off by religion, in all the enormous volume of factual information nowhere does the author ever attack the subject of theology. "Nuns" is an inportant book as well as an interesting one, because it helps to dispel myths and fears which have long made the lives of the sisters even more difficult then they already are.

Amateurism, Heroism in Arctic Saga

E. D. Ward-Harris

In May, 1913, a group of scientists straggled into Victoria and made their separate ways to the naval dockyard in Esquimalt where an old whaling vessel, the Karluk, was being fitted out for service with the Vilhjalmur Stefansson expedition to the Arctic.

The expedition, planned as a vast four-year scientific project, was financed by the federal government and was designed to fully explore the enormous area between the northernmost shores of Canada and the North Pole.

The project captured the public imagination and the scientists were treated in Victoria like heroes, being lunched and dined by clubs, societies and private citizens. But, with good reason, they were uneasy in their minds.

Ship, Crew Unsuitable

The Karluk was clearly unfitted for her task; her bows and engines were not powerful enough to withstand severe ice conditions. Scientific equipment was stowed in the hold under food and other supplies without any plan and was virtually inaccessible. The skipper, Captain Robert Bartlett, a seasoned Arctic seaman, had been hired at the last moment and had no say in the choice of crew.

Unbelievably, the scratch crew had been picked up along the coast. One man was a drug addict, another has venereal disease; several, against orders, smuggled drink aboard. The chief mate was aged 20!

Worst of all, the leader of the expedition, Stefansson, whom most of the scientists had never met, did not arrive in Victoria until June 7, three days before sailing. His unvariable reply to all complaints and doubts was that everything would be sorted out and become clear when the expedition reached Hershel Island — which it never did.

On the way to Alaska Stefansson purchased two more ships, masses of stores, sledges and dogs, and hired an Eskimo family, the man as guide and his wife as seamstress — to fabricate Arctic clothing for the entire expedition during the voyage!

Men, goods, and dogs were distributed willy-nilly among the three vessels so that scientists became separated from their equipment. It would all sort itself out, said Stefansson, when they reached Hershel Island.

Stranded on Ice Floe

It never did sort itself out because the Karluk became trapped by ice and on January 11, 1914 was crushed and sunk, leaving 22 men, one woman and her two children, 16 dogs and a cat stranded on an ice floe in the Arctic Ocean.

The party was leaderless because some weeks earlier Stefansson had left the ship to go on a hunting trip and had failed to return. In fact, he had gone about his own business and continued his northern exploration for a further five years.

Thanks to Captain Bartlett's foresight, immense snow houses had been constructed and masses of stores had been transferred to them from the Karluk. But it was a hopeless situation because, other than Bartlett and the Eskimos, no one had had any previous Arctic experience.

No program of Arctic training had been started for the uninitiated; there was no acclimatization program and no practice in the skills of survival.

There were experts in many fields on the expedition, but the party was split up almost from the word go, and at the first moment of crisis inexperienced scientists and crew members were deprived of their leader and all the knowledge and experience of survival on which the whole enterprise was based.

Bartlett realized the seriousness of the situation. After instructing the party of greenhorns to ferry themselves and their supplies across mountainous pack-ice to the nearest land, Wrangel Island, he and an Eskimo left on what was to be a 700-mile journey to Siberia to seek help.

On October 25, 1914, the U.S. revenue cutter, Bear, arrived in Esquimalt harbour with the survivors of the Karluk.

What happened to the Karluk party between January and October, 1914, has never been told. Until now. William Laird McKinlay, a retired Scottish school principal, was the magnetician and meteorologist of the expedition. He is now 88, and the sole survivor. In a book, titled Karluk, he tells the tragic story simply and feelingly.

Eight men died moving across the heaving ice floes, and on Wrangel Island one man shot himself, two died of malnutrition and the rest barely managed to keep alive until rescue came.

A Lack of Teamwork

The situation called for not only technical skills which none of them possessed, but a high degree of moral fibre, mental stability, team spirit and comradeship. No attempt had been made to hand-pick members of the expedition with these qualities in mind and McKinlay says the absence of comradeship and team spirit that good leadership inspires were the worst feature of the months on Wrangel Island where the men did just that — wrangle.

They wrangled over food, over duties, over sharing ammunition. There was lying, cheating, stealing, malingering, as well as a lot of courage and humanity, particularly in the devoted care shown to the sick. When rescued by Bartlett, on board the Bear, the party was at the end of its tether.

McKinlay has come to realize the terrible amateurism of the Stefansson expedition. It was of course the heyday of the amateur, when men tried to climb Everest in knickerbockers and Norfolk jackets, and Britain was wild with pride over Scott's tragic failure to be first to reach the South Pole — another exercise in splendid amateurism.

In 1920, Stefansson was presented with the Hubbard medal, the highest honor of the National Geographic Society of America. In his acceptance speech he did not even refer to the Karluk and the subsequent ordeal, an omission which infuriated McKinlay.

Then, in the same year, and despite the 11 deaths on his 1913-18 expedition, Stefansson, still talking about his "friendly Arctic", sent a private expedition of four young men (two of them aged 19 and 20) and an Eskimo girl to "colonize" the ill-fated Wrangel Island. Only the Eskimo girl survived.

Dossier on Stefansson

That did it. When the news reached McKinlay he began to compile a dossier on Stefansson's Arctic adventures. For the past 50 years he has studied and analyzed, checked and cross-checked every word published by Stefansson, Bartlett and the great explorers of the day. His findings are now ready to be passed to government archives in Ottawa.

Meanwhile, 'to put the record straight," he decided to tell the story of the Karluk and Wrangel Island as he saw it, because "I owe that to the memory of my dead comrades, and to Captain Robert Barlett, who saved my life."

Karluk is his story, plain and unvarnished. It is a notable addition to the annals of Arctic exploration, a story of heroism under appalling conditions, and implicit on every page in an indictment of Stefansson.

The Housing Crisis: Can Anything Be Done?

By JULIAN REID

Although the current housing crisis has only recently begun to make headlines, in fact it is almost as old as the cities that nurture it. A shortage of decent shelter is the chronic disease of urbanization.

Traditionally, its victims have been the least favored members of society: the immigrant, the dispossessed, the handicapped, the chronically destitute. Even during the recent decades of affluence, the underprivileged tenth of Canada's urban population was poorly served by the housing market; and today their ranks are being swelled by a growing number of senior citizens and single parents with their children.

But what has brought the crisis to a head is the fact that numerous middle-income families are today being caught in the same accommodation-pinch which formerly affected only the unsung poor. The consequences, according to ecologist Fulton Fisher, will be epoch-making. "The next big social revolution in the Western world is emerging, almost unnoticed, from a growing sense of frustration and insecurity on the part of more and more people who are finding it increasingly difficult to obtain suitable housing."

Dr. Fisher is one of 61 assorted "experts," ranging from politicians through architects to developers and realtors, who were interviewed during 1975 by Gordon Soules, a Vancouver economic and marketing consultant. Their responses, together with those of selected homeowners and tenants, form the basis for an ambitious privately-published report on The Housing Crisis. Soules insists that his findings, though they centre on the situation in Greater Vancouver, are "equally applicable to most other urban areas of the Western world."

Globally, the housing crisis is fuelled by the accelerating influx of immigrants from rural areas into the cities, as urban population is increased at the rate of 6.5 per cent annually — which means it will double within 11 years.

In Canada, if present trends continue, within 20 years three-quarters of the population will be concentrated in the major urban areas. Greater Vancouver is among the fastest growing of these. Swelled by immigration from other parts of the country, its population has risen some three per cent annually since 1969. At this rate, its present 1.2 million will double before the end of the century.

During 1969, 17,690 new houses were started in the Greater Vancouver area. Over ensuing years, as population snowballed, the figure dropped — to 12,037 in 1974. Meanwhile, housing prices soared, as did interest rates on mortgages. The monthly cost of home-ownership more than doubled, far outpacing the median family income, which increased by just over one-half.

Increasingly many young couples can no longer afford homes like those to which families at their income level have traditionally felt entitled. Prices inflate out of reach almost before their eyes. As one concerned parent observes wryly: "We sold our home eight years ago for $20,000. The next weekend it was on the market for $26,000. It is now on sale at $79,000. And that's in only eight years!"

Many families, whether owners or tenants, are compelled to spend what would formerly have been considered an excessive portion of their income on shelter. The old rule of thumb that one-fifth should be budgeted for housing no longer applies; the new generation takes it for granted that the proper figure is closer to one-third. Some young couples are being compelled to allocate one-half or more.

Meanwhile, rents are high and rental accommodation in painfully short supply — a situation exacerbated by rent controls, which caused the construction of new rental units to slow almost to a standstill.

Many families are driven into overpriced condominiums, characterized by one resident as breeding grounds for unhappiness" — especially among children. Others, particularly single parents, are forced into overcrowded "family ghettos," where adolescent despair and delinquency are rampant. Increasingly many are compelled to double up. often under uncomfortably cramped conditions.

Such are the dimensions of the current housing crisis, in Greater Vancouver and throughout the developed world. Since it is fuelled largely by the influx of immigrants, lured by the prospect of employment at high urban wages, one obvious way to mitigate the problem is to reduce this flow. Proposals advanced by Soules' experts include a systematic program of regional decentralization involving the construction of new "satellite towns," and provincially-instituted measures to increase the attractiveness of small-town and rural employment.

But these are long-term policies. However desirable, they avoid confronting the immediate crisis.

Another favorite prescription is a systematic shift away from traditional building patterns, towards an increased concentration on medium-and high-density housing. Admittedly, there is wide-spread resistance to this trend. However, as economist Michael Goldberg points out, "it is not density itself that is undesirable, but the way we have been designing it." Many authorities agree on the need for imaginative planning and innovative designs, so that "compact housing" developments can become true homes rather than the ill-conceived "concrete jungles" many of them are today.

Such proposals are undoubtedly the wave of the future. But the sense of urgency which pervades them is often premature. In the Vancouver area, insists Soule, there is no immediate shortage of land suitable for building conventional homes. The alleged "residential land shortage" is a deception, promoted by real-estate interests in order to drive up land prices,

In fact, there is general agreement that inflated land prices which result are the real key to the present housing crisis. As long as inflationary pressures continue, high-density housing projects will only add to their impact.

The chief cause of inflated land prices is unrestrained speculation. In theory, prices are determined by the free operation of the law of supply-and-demand; but in practice it is the speculators who regulate the supply — particularly the few large development companies which, in Vancouver as in most Canadian urban areas, control key parcels of vacant land in the regions which official planners have earmarked for civic expansion.

Under speculative pressure, compounded by "no-growth" zoning regulations and other municipal restraints on development, land prices in the Vancouver region have risen as much as 500 per cent over the last six years. "The average homeowner or tenant in Greater Vancouver," asserts community planning expert Thomas I. Gunton, "must realize that at least 25 to 30 per cent of his mortgage payments or rent goes directly to a land speculator who contributed little, if anything, to the production of the premises."

One effective device for controlling speculation is the public land-bank. In Saskatoon, where a pioneer landbanking program was initiated in 1954, serviced lots equivalent to those priced at $30,000 in Vancouver sell for about $5,000. According to Gunton, a similar program could halve current land prices in the Vancovuer area, reducing housing costs by 25 per cent or more.

But it might take as long as 15 years for most Canadian cities to acquire enough land to enable them to dominate the market. Meanwhile, the consensus among Soules' experts is that the relevant levels of government must act immediately, taking drastic steps to curb speculation and establish effective control over urban land-prices.

But how? Several authorities suggest freezing land-values at their present level, then waiting for monetary inflation to catch up with them. One, West Vancouver planner Robert Collier, calls for "a 100 per cent capital gains tax on the sale of principal-residence dwellings and new land."

More radically, Fulton Fisher predicts approvingly that the rising tide of protest against excessive housing costs "will be responsible, in the long term, for the transference of all land back to state-community ownership."

Human Resources Minister Bill Vander Zalm concurs that communal ownership is "the ideal system," although it would be difficult to introduce into Canada. "However," he adds, "I am convinced that it will come about gradually in my lifetime, not only in British Columbia, but also throughout the Western world."

Plainly, the present housing crisis has far-reaching implications. It remains to be seen whether the governments concerned have the decisiveness and flexibility to take whatever steps may prove necessary to ensure that someday even the poorest of their citizens will no longer want for the security of a home he can call his own.
